THAW MUTTERS JUMBLED WORDS UNDER GRILLING

His Explanations of Incoherent Notes Are in Themselves Incoherent.

GIVES CASE A BLOW

Doctor Had Previously Testified That He Thought Prisoner Insane.

QUESTIONED BY JUDGE

Alienist Says He Has Not Had Opportunity to Form Conclusive Opinion.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Aug. 3.—Harry K. Thaw was again called to the witness stand today and under District Attorney Jerome's vigorous questioning he presented a pitiful spectacle. He muttered incoherently, a jumble of meaningless words falling from his lips so rapidly that the stenographer had difficulty in following him.

His face became pallid and his lips twitched. The hand in which he held a paper he had been asked to identify shook. He seemed to realize that he had dealt his prospects of gaining his freedom a hard blow. He was finally saved from further grilling by Justice Mills ordering a recess.

Taw's nervousness was apparent when he was first called to the stand. He was asked to identify various letters and notes in his own handwriting and to explain what they meant. One letter read:

"While lunching in Martin's with Evelyn I saw a girl, a beautiful girl, two years before—but the 'B' had sent her soul to hell. I raved at the damnable outrage."

Intended for His Attorney.

Thaw explained that the memorandum was intended for his attorney.

"It's one of those stolen letters, isn't it?" he finally rejoined.

"Did you think that Mr. Delmas was going to use that information in the suit?" asked Jerome.

"Well, he could suit himself," said Thaw.

"Explain this incident," directed Jerome.

Thaw hesitated, then rattled off an answer. "I might not have figured it a damnable outrage, although it was about that—a wretched crime, anyway," he said. "It is true I knew the girl and knew that she had been with White and I also noticed the difference in her appearance from the first time I met her."

Explains Mathematical Problem.

"Well, about that memorandum, reading 'X equals or infinity'," pressed Jerome as Thaw was mumbling along his words at a rapid rate and in a subdued voice.

"Well, I'll explain it this way," said Thaw, removing his eyeglasses and wiping them with a handkerchief. "That is a mathematical problem: 'X equals or infinity' is the same as X equals zero. That is the best way I can explain it."

"What connection has Hummell to that?" pursued Jerome.

"Well you and Hummell had lunch together I had heard, and if you substitute 'X' for Hummell and zero you might make meaning out of it." Thaw muttered hurriedly.

Another letter identified by Thaw as his handwriting read: "My responsibility is gone. Should I manage her again I would do different. I can say no more, but make the best of it, except that my conscience was far from bad except for something to which every mistake, evil, foolishness or badness, every illness, every illusion destroyed, every opportunity missed. All these things are as bad as a split glass of water in the river or to the lost barrel in a disabled ship—poisoned—bad."

Thaw Again Muddled.

Another read as follows:

"Jerome is after personal enmity. He continues, give her this. But if he doesn't, recall Mrs. Thaw. No redirect."

Thaw's explanation at this point was so confusing that the stenographer had difficulty recording his replies. Thaw skipped from paragraph to paragraph generally, stating that the notes were intended as "suggestions for counsel."

The implacable Jerome gave not the slightest heed to the disconcerted witness; he prodded and prodded him to answer. His exhibition was a pitiful collapse of the Thaw family's hope, and, following quickly on the heels of Dr. Baker's declaration that Thaw is a lunatic and thus unsafe at large, was a hard blow to the Thaw case.

The question which floundered Thaw was the same which upset him at Poughkeepsie. In both instances it was met with opposition from his attorney and resulted in Thaw's withdrawal from the stand. It was, "Will you submit to an examination by the State alienists, if you are so satisfied as to your present mental condition?"

Lawyer Morschauser jumped to his feet in an instant and objected to the question, and Thaw did not answer. Thaw had explained previously that he would not submit to such an examination on advice of counsel, and such a

CAT IS ITS OWN SURGEON IN PERFORMING TRACHEOTOMY

Cuts Open Throat and Windpipe and Extracts Fishbone Choking It.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Tracheotomy is a delicate surgical operation. Even the best surgeons do not think of performing it on themselves. In that they have been bested by "Dr. Ginger," a pet cat in the morgue of Bellevue Hospital.

"Dr. Ginger" cut open his throat and windpipe, removed a long and stout fishbone that was slowly choking him to death, and then applied nature's salve to heal the wound. The only surgical instruments he had were his own sharp claws.

Dr. John McAllister of the New York Central's staff of surgeons, examined the incision and also the bone which lay near the cat.

"It is a successful operation," he said, "and this four-legged surgeon is the first one I ever met who could perform tracheotomy on himself."

GIRL BITTEN TRYING TO MAKE PEACE BETWEEN DOG AND CAT

Miss Madge Phelan's Sympathy for Feline Animal Leads to Her Injury.

The usual lot of a peacemaker fell to Miss Madge Phelan, 20 years old, a stenographer, when she interfered in a fight between a cat and a dog Monday afternoon. One of the combatants bit her.

Miss Phelan, who lives at 1387 Arlington avenue, was on her way home when she saw a dog and cat in a heated argument.

"You're a liar, phst, phst," hissed the cat.

"Take it back, ruff, ruff, take it back," growled the dog.

Feminine sympathy for the feline animal aroused Miss Phelan and she rushed between the fighters. She does not know which one she seized, but she is positive one of them seized her. Then she went to a drug store.

A patrolman, after it was all over, made an investigation, and learned that a man had dislodged the cat from a tree and thus had precipitated the quarrel.

Miss Phelan refused to permit either of the animals to be killed.

SCOTCH COLLIE ARRESTED; IN CELL NO. 1 AT STATION

A Scotch collie dog occupies cell No. 1 of the women's tier in the Central District police holdover, labeled "evidence."

Detective Doherty and O'Brien, who arrested the dog, found him at Twenty-third and Locust streets Monday night in company with two men, one of whom was recognized as a police character.

Although there is no law prohibiting a dog from associating with police characters, the sleuths believed it their duty to take some action.

"That's a valuable dog," said Doherty as he fed his prisoner Tuesday. "I'll bet we'll hear from the owner pretty soon."

DOG WOUNDED BY BURGLAR, BUT PROTECTS THE HOUSE

Mrs. H. E. Benderoth of 3756 Olive street has more confidence in her watchdog since he allowed himself to be wounded by a burglar. He "made good" and prevented the burglar from getting into the house. Furthermore, Mrs. Benderoth is willing to wager that the housebreaker was himself wounded.

At 2 a. m. Tuesday Mrs. Benderoth was awakened by the continued barking of her canine guardian. She admitted him to the house and discovered he had been cut on the back. She had heard footsteps retreating down the alley.

"I guess the dog bit the burglar," said Mrs. Benderoth in reporting the matter to the police.

PREACHER SAVES HIS GUEST FROM DEATH IN RIVER

The Rev. Edmund Barnes, 61 Years Old, Keeps Drowning Man Afloat.

CROWDS CHEER HIM

Pastor's Rescue of Younger and Heavier Man Seen by Chautauquans.

Friends of the Rev. Edmund Barnes, pastor of Epworth Methodist Episcopal Church, Belleville, declared he qualified for a Carnegie hero medal Tuesday forenoon by rescuing a man from drowning in the Mississippi River at Piasa Chautauqua. Pastor Barnes is 61 years old. The man he saved, J. A. Barnett of Edwardsville, is much heavier than the minister.

Mr. Barnett and his family are guests of the preacher at "The Kentucky Home," the Barnes cottage on the Chautauqua grounds. The two men had determined to have a "jugging" party Tuesday afternoon. A Chautauqua jugging party is an innocent pastime, merely being the process of corking empty jugs, to which fish lines are attached, and letting them float in the water for automatic fishing.

The pastor and his guest went on a sandbar in front of the grounds to seine for minnows. Mr. Barnett wore his bathing suit and shoes. Mr. Barnes was dressed in overalls, shirt and shoes.

Barnett waded out with the seine and suddenly went over a "step-off" into the water beyond his depth. He could swim, however, and was not worried at first. Mr. Barnes was 50 yards away.

Pastor Swims to Rescue.

"I'll swim up to where you are," Barnett shouted. He tried to swim upstream, but exhausted himself struggling against the current and was being carried far out when he called for the preacher to help him.

Pastor Barnes, who is a rapid swimmer, quickly swam to his friend, who, though practically exhausted, still kept his presence of mind.

The pastor reached the struggling man and caught him by the left arm. "Now, paddle with all your might," he said.

He discovered very shortly, however, that it was difficult to swim with one hand across a strong current and pull with him a heavier man, who was practically exhausted.

"Catch hold of my shirt and I'll tow you in," the clergyman instructed. Barnett caught the preacher's shirt at the back and held on with the desperate clutch of the drowning.

With both arms free, the Rev. Mr. Barnes now made good headway, but when still in deep water, many yards from shore, his own strength began to fail.

He called to J. Beacham of Grafton, who had a boat at the landing. Until then those on shore were not aware that the men were in peril.

Beacham put out swiftly in his boat and rowed to meet the rescuer and rescued, both of whom clung to the side of the craft until shallow water was reached.

The Rev. Mr. Barnes was cheered as he reached shore. He is said to be contemplating a Chautauqua lecture in reply to the Osler theory.

FANS SEE ONE GAME ON THE SCOREBOARD AS POLICE NAP

Headquarters Forgets Double-Header Is to Be Played and Patrolmen Arrive at 3:30.

Two heads are better than one. So is a double-header superior to a single header from the standpoint of the fan who must content himself with seeing the game played on a scoreboard.

The police of the "move-on" squad were instructed to begin operations as usual at 3:30 p. m., Tuesday.

The consciousness of the police authorities slipped a cog somewhere and failed to perceive the fact, patent to all fans, that the Browns were playing a doube-header.

So the faithful assembled before 2 o'clock and were in undisturbed possession of scoreboard vantage points for an hour and a half.

THIEF LOSES $100 HE STOLE

Money Drops From Pocket of Trousers He Drags Away.

Kosto Koprocia of 830 Manchester avenue considers himself burglar-proof since an experience of Monday night. He was sleeping when a knight of the dark lantern stole into his house. Koprocia's trousers were hanging at the foot of his bed. In the pockets was $100.

The burglar lifted the trousers and dragged them upside down from the room. When Koprocia awoke Tuesday he was trouserless, but his $100 were lying on the floor, where it had fallen from the pocket.

SPIRITS TELL OF AFFINITY; WIFE SEEKS DIVORCE

Discord Began in 1896, When Jacob Mendelsohn Visited a Medium.

Weary of hearing him allude to certain spiritualistic mediums as "angels," and of being told of "revelations" to the effect that she was not his soul's true mate, Mrs. Bessie Mendelsohn Tuesday sued Jacob Mendelsohn for divorce.

She dates the beginning of family discord to 1896, when, after 24 years of married life, Mendelsohn became a Spiritualist. He has since, the wife charges, shown greater liberality in giving to the spiritualistic cause than in providing for his home, $6 a week being his allowance to her and $350 his gift to the fund for a new Temple of Spiritualism.

In her divorce petition, Mrs. Mendelsohn states that her husband is in mercantile business on Third street. She says that, since his adherence to the spirit creed began, matters of diet have occasioned strife between them, and that he once pushed over a table because she would not eat pork, and at another time did the same because she would not eat fish.

He was told by mediums, she relates, that his affinity was a medium, and repeated the stateemnt to her. Her affinity, she says he told her, was an Irishman, though he named no particular individual. He was accustomed, she says, to speak of mediums as "angels."

Mendelsohn is a salesman, working from 708 North Third street. Efforts to see him there Tuesday were unsuccessful.

LOSES WATCH AIDING BEGGAR

Benefactor's Vest Rifled While He Goes for Food.

The heart of Adam Baker went out to a poor man who begged for food Tuesday morning.

Adam Baker works for the Condin bakery at Seventh and Walnut streets. When the man approached him and asked for a crust he hurried into the shop to get some fresh doughnuts. When he returned the beggar had disappeared. So had a gold watch and chain which had been in Adam's vest on the seat of a wagon.

1500 ARMED STRIKERS ARE IN CONTROL OF ILASCO, MO.

Riot on Streets and Keep Men Away From Atlas Portland Cement Plant.

HANNIBAL, Mo., Aug. 3.—Between 1000 and 1500 foreign strikers are parading the streets at Ilasco, near here, where the big Atlas Portland Cement Co. is located, rioting and driving everyone out of the town who attempts to work.

They are armed with clubs, knives and guns, and it is probable that before night a call will be sent to the Governor for troops if the situation does not improve. The 21 deputies are entirely powerless. The night force was chased away from the plant and the morning work train was sent back to Hannibal.

One man, who had nerve enough to get off and ignore the threats of death, was knocked in the head with a club. An appeal has been made to the Hannibal Commercial Club for support in the fi[ght]

MAN AND WIFE WALK 775 MILES WITH CHILDREN

Family Reaches St. Louis Footsore After Tramping From Pittsburg.

Driven by high water from their home near Pittsburg, Pa., Ben Garrison and his little family set out to walk to Salt Lake City, the nearest place where the husband could learn of the prospect of employment. They walked into St. Louis Tuesday after 10 weeks' foot travel, penniless and almost shoeless.

Garrison, a young man below medium size, carried his 3-year-old boy, Andrew, a loaded carpetbag and a worn bed comfort. The wife, Mrs. Ella Garrison, carried 6-months-old Wilfred, whose chubby face had been unmercifully bitten by mosquitoes.

At Ninth and Chestnut streets Police Sergt. Peters saw the disconsolate quartet standing on the pavement. The children were crying from hunger and fatigue, and the footsore parents seemed ready to drop from exhaustion.

They made no appeal to the sergeant, but their distress was so evident that he could not pass without speaking to them.

"You look as if you were in trouble," the sergeant said.

"I'm looking for work," said Garrison. Then he told of the long journey on foot from Pittsburg, broken only by a short railroad ride in Indiana. The distance covered is about 775 miles.

The soles of the wife's shoes were worn through, and her feet were almost as bare to the pavement as were those of the two babies.

The last stage of their walk had been from Cincinnati, over the tracks of the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern and the country roads adjoining, to East St. Louis.

Sergt. Peters took up a collection of $2.10 on his beat, then conducted the family to a room at 115 North Twelfth street, where he ordered them to clean up and rest. He said he would try to get work for Garrison.

The wife has relatives in Salt Lake City. They have promised her and her husband that, if they can get to Pueblo, Colo., they will send transportation for the rest of the way, and will get work for the husband in a smelter.

EXPERT BELIEVES TURRISI WROTE THE KIDNAPER'S NOTE

Similarity in Penmanship of Letter Demanding Money and Fugitive's Signature.

BOY AND GIRL LURED AWAY; $25,000 RANSOM DEMANDED

Manufacturer, Whose Daughter Is Abducted, Has Twice Been Victim of Mysterious Explosions and Has Given Money on Black Hand Threats.

Handwriting Expert Believes Turrisi Wrote Letter to Viviano

A QUICK but careful examination of the photographic reproduction of the letter addressed to Pietro Viviano, comparing its characteristics with those in the signature of Sam Turrisi, convinces me that they are the same. The striking similarities are in the capital P and S, and the small r's and n's.

IN each case where a capital P is used, the writer of the letter makes the capital S found in the signature, as a foundation for the capital, changing it by an upward curve into the P.

GUS V. R. MECHIN.

The handwriting in the "Black Hand" letter received by Pietro Viviano, after the kidnaping of two children of wealthy St. Louis Italian manufacturers, is identical with that of Sam Turrisi, according to a comparison made for the Post-Dispatch by Gus V. R. Mechin, who has qualified as an expert in many famous court trials.

Turrisi, the last person seen with the children, has fled, but through the arrest of Joseph Pagano of 1911 North Thirteenth street, the police believe they will obtain information as to Turrisi's whereabouts.

Pagano's wife, Fannie, and his mother-in-law, Rosa Dragota, were arrested, but were released by Chief of Detectives Smith Tuesday afternoon after he had satisfied himself nothing could be gained by holding them.

They think they will be able to trace to New Orleans the kidnaper of Alfonso Viviano, 5 years old, and Grace Viviano, 2½ years old, cousins, who were lured away from the home of their parents at 1911 North Seventh street, Monday afternoon. The fathers of the children are first cousins, each named Pierto Viviano. They are manufacturers of spaghetti and macaroni and are reputed to be wealthy.

Father Has Not Sum Demanded.

Pietro Viviano, father of the boy, said Tuesday that their neighbors have an exaggerated idea of their wealth.

"I am not in a position to pay the $25,000 ransom demanded by the kidnaper," he said. "If all my brothers and cousins were to put their cash together they could not raise that amount. The kidnaper is mistaken if he thinks he can get a large sum from us. When he realizes that, I think, he will return our children."

Vincenzo Ricardo, who recently failed in the wholesale liquor business, and who told friends that he had a plan to raise capital and start in business again in New Orleans, and who is said by the Paganos to have started from St. Louis to New Orleans Monday afternoon, is also being sought by the police.

Ricardo knew Sam Turrisi, and, according to the Pagatos, he visited their home Monday afternoon accompanied by a man whom he introduced as "Tony," who he said was going to New Orleans with him. Their description of "Tony" tallies with that of Turisi.

Mrs. Pagano and Mrs. Dragota admit that three trunks and a "telescope" valise were taken from their home in an express wagon Monday afternoon. They said it was the baggage of Ricardo and "Tony." They could not explain why this baggage left their home, as neither Ricardo nor Turrisi lived there.

Capt. Schoppe of the Carr Street District said at noon that an Italian, who because of fear of the "Black Hand" did not want his name revealed, told him that the "Tony" who accompanied Ricardo to the Pagano home was Turrisi.

Ben Marghesi Sought.

Vito Viviano, uncle of the kidnaped children, has asked the police to look for Ben Marghesi.

"I knew Turrisi in Palermo," said the uncle. "His closest friend there was Marghesi. I have learned that Marghesi came to St. Louis about the same time Turrisi did and that Marghesi up to a month ago lived in the house now occupied by the Paganos. He moved out when they moved in.

"I am sure that Marghesi knew all about Turrisi's plans and movements. They were like brothers."

Conflicting Stories Told.

Pietro Viviano, father of the kidnaped boy, said Tuesday that he believed the abduction was the work of a "gang," but said he had never heard of the "Black Hand."

The father of the girl, who has the same name as the father of the boy, said that he believed the kidnaping was the work of the "Black Hand."

Joseph Pagano, under arrest, is not permitted to communicate with his imprisoned wife and mother-in-law.

The women told conflicting stories of Joseph's movements Monday. They first said he was at work all day and did not return until dark. Later they said that he arrived home at noon and was there the remainder of the day.

Mrs. Pagano said that Ricardo and "Tony" arrived at the Pagano home at 4 p. m. Mrs. Dragota said they arrived at noon.

Trusted Friend Took Children for Ice Cream and They Did Not Return

Sam Turrisi departed from the Viviano home at noon Monday with the children, telling their mothers that he would take them to an ice cream parlor. An hour before taking the children away he left the Viviano home with a suit case, saying that he would leave his clothing at a tailor shop to have it pressed.

The fact that a man believed to answer the description of Turrisi was seen half an hour later entering Pagano's home caused the police to arrest Bocana.

Pagano says that a man carrying a suitcase did enter his home at 11:30 a. m. Monday, but he insists that it was his cousin, Vincenzo Ricardo.

Departed for New Orleans.

He says Ricardo carried a valise and that with him was a man whom he introduced to Pagano as "Tony." They remained at his home until 4 p. m., when they departed, saying they were going to New Orleans.

Turrisi left the Viviano home with his suitcase at 11 a. m., returned there without the suitcase and took the children away at noon.

At 4 p. m. Pietro Viviano, father of Grace Viviano and uncle of Tom, received this special delivery letter:

Pietro Viviano and Brother—Dear Friends: We are notifying you of the disappearance of your girl and the boy who was taking care of the girl. They will be safe and for the we want $25,000 and not a cent l Don't mention this to the pol because if you do it will be w for you and for all the brothers regard to the delivery of the mon take the Wellston car, and when stops take the other to the left. FINDS ANTI-ANT DRUG FATTENING FOR ALTON PEST

Teacher Drops a Few Lines to State Entomologist Who Gave Prescriptions.

COOKING IS EFFECTIVE

But Who Has Time to Gather Potfull? Writes Prof. Richardson.

Principal Richardson of the Alton High School took his pen in hand Tuesday to drop a few lines to State Entomologist S. A. Forbes to let Mr. Forbes know that he was well and so were all the Alton ants, and he hoped the entomologist was enjoying the same blessing.

Prof. Richardson also dropped a few lines about Entomologist Forbes' anti-ant prescriptions, supplied a few weeks ago when the professor wrote to the entomologist, at the earnest request of many Alton housewives, whose premises were overrun with tiny red ants.

"I tried all Mr. Forbes' ant reducers," Prof. Richardson told a Post-Dispatch reporter. "Only one of them did any good, and that was too much trouble to operate.

Tried Carbon Bisulphide.

"First I tried the carbon bisulphide ant exterminator, pouring the drug into the antholes. Mr. Forbes said it would kill all the ants caught at home. It didn't. They seemed to thrive on it. They came right up out of their holes as usual when they woke up, and began to invade in their customary free and independent manner.

"Then I experimented with oil of lemon, rubbing it on tables, shelves and wherever ants climb about in the kitchen. I am inclined to think oil of lemon is regarded by the ant family much as we regard lemonade or ice cream. They seemed to consider it a fine delicacy. They ate it all up and stayed around asking for more.

Boiled 'Em by Spongeful.

"Then I tried the soaked sponge recipe. I wet the sponges in sugared water and left them where they would attract ants. The ant-covered sponges I then put into boiling water. Oh, yes, that killed the ants; but when there are millions of them a busy person hasn't time to cook all that apply."

SEEKS HIS NEPHEW AND HIS RUNAWAY WIFE IN ST. LOUIS

Cleveland Man Asks Police to Find Former British Soldier Missing With Woman.

Hine Simpson, a wealthy fruit grower near Cleveland, O., has appealed to the police of St. Louis to help him find his nephew. He thinks that if he finds his nephew a search for his wife and little son, which began 10 days ago, will be ended.

The nephew, Edward Simpson, is 35 years old, and fought with the British in India and South Africa. Hine Simpson's wife, Mary, is 45 years old, and the son, Willie, is 8. The trio disappeared from the Simpson home in West Park, near Cleveland, July 20.

In a letter to Chief Creecy, Simpson states he will pay a reward of $50 for information of his wife, and that if she is found here he will come on the first train.

On July 20 Mrs. Simpson and her son started, ostensibly, on a visit to a relative in Cleveland. The same day the nephew drew his pay and disappeared. It was learned later that the nephew had purchased railroad tickets for Lowell, Mass. The husband followed, but failed to find his nephew there, and returned.

Recently Hine Simpson received information which led him to believe that his wife and child were in St. Louis.

SPANISH MILITARY BRINGS PEACE OUT OF CATALONIAN REVOLT

Column of Artillery, Cavalry and Infantry Marches on Insurgents at Sabadell.

By Associated Press.

MADRID, Aug. 3.—Tranquility now reigns throughout Spain, except in certain isolated localities of Catalonia, according to an announcement made early today by the Minister of the Interior.

A column of troops composed of artillery, cavalry and infantry is today marching on Sabadell, 10 miles from Barcelona, where the insurgents are still holding out.

The general strike at Madrid and Bilbao, announced for yesterday, failed owing to the precautionary measures taken by the authorities.

SPANISH COMMANDER WANTS MORE TROOPS IN MOROCCO

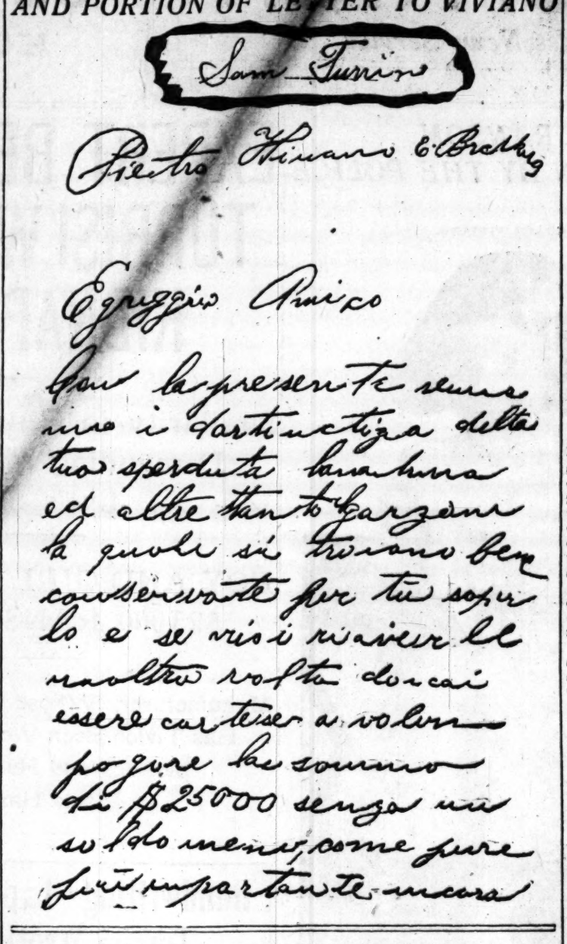

Attack on the Moors by Gen. Marina Waits on the Arrival of Reinforcements.

MADRID, Aug. 3.—Gen. Marina, the Spanish military commander in Morocco, is awaiting reinforcement. As soon as the necessary troops arrive the advanced Spanish positions at Mount Gurugu and Sidiamet will be strengthened preparatory to an advance upon Fez, the Spanish objective.

The Red Cross and other organizations are working ceaselessly to care for the sick and wounded both at Melilla and at Spanish ports.

SIGNATURE OF SUSPECTED KIDNAPER AND PORTION OF LETTER TO VIVIANO

Kidnap Suspect Had Been in St. Louis But Six Months

you peace forever, and no one will dare insult you any more.

(Signed) MOUTH SHUT.

P. S.—Pietro, I pray you save my life.

Capt. Schoppe of the Carr Street District ordered a search of Turrisi's room Tuesday. In a trunk were found collector's reports made to the Singer Sewing Machine Co., for which Turrisi worked in New York. They were signed with Turrisi's name and the police say the handwriting resembles that of the ransom letter received by Viviano.

At the Postoffice it was said that the ransom letter bore two postmarks, and that this indicated that it came to the central station in a mail car, and was not dropped into the box at the Postoffice or in the downtown district. One of the marks was made with a hand stamp, such as is used on the cars, and the other was made with a machine stamp at the Postoffice.

A Wellston mail car delivered mail at the Postoffice 40 minutes before the special delivery ransom letter was put into Pietro Viviano's hands by the carrier.

Pogano described the "grip" which Ricardo carried as being a white canvas telescope fastened with a clasp instead of the usual straps. Policeman Tomasso says that this is the same description which was given to him by the Vivianos as that of the "telescope" which Turrisi carried when he left their home.

Police watched every outlet from the city all night and a special detail stationed at Wellston and Suburban Garden, near the end of the Wellston street car line.

Pietro Viviano, father of the girl, with Detective Joyce, went to Wellston and paced up and down the Wellston and Hodiamont tracks for nearly two hours. No one approached him to ask for a cigarette.

He says he is anxious to have the kidnaper arrested and he has not yet signified his willingness to pay the ransom demanded.

Capt. Schoppe Monday night received a "tip" that the children were hidden at the home of Joe Ventimiglia, in Prospect Heights, north of Baden. He sent two special officers, who searched the house, and others in the neighborhood, but found no trace of the boy and girl.

Ventimiglia killed Sam Bommarito, at Seventh and Biddle streets, in March, 1908. He served a jail sentence and then moved out of the Biddle street neighborhood.

Turrisi Here, Six Months, Showed Great Interest in the Children

Sam Turrisi came to St. Louis from Pittsburg six months ago and went to work in the Vivianos factory, at 515 Biddle street. Like the Vivianos, he was from Palermo, Sicily, and he made himself so agreeable that the Vivianos treated him as one of the family and took him into their home as a lodger.

He seemed to regard the children of the two Pietros with great affection and took them to Antonio Rosciglione's ice cream parlor, at 1011 North Seventh street, every day.

Rosciglione said Tuesday that Turrisi and the children entered his shop at 10:30 a. m. Monday. He told them that he had not yet made his day's supply of ice cream, and Turrisi said that he would return at noon. Rosciglione says Turrisi and the children did not visit the shop again.

Detectives Put on Case.

Chief of Police Creecy Tuesday summoned Chief of Detectives Smith and told him to put every available man on the case.

"I do not believe the kidnaper has left town," said Creecy.

"We have been handicapped by the fact that Pietro Viviano, father of the girl, did not notify us until three hours after he received the ransom letter and seven hours after the children disappeared. I presume he was at first afraid to tell the police. His delay makes our work doubly hard.

"I believe that Turrisi came from Pittsburg to kidnap these children. The Vivianos are looked upon as the wealthiest men in the Italian colony. The combined capital stock of their factories is $20,000. The writer of the letter probably had an exaggerated idea of their wealth."

At the tailor shop, 1415 Franklin avenue, where Turrisi said he was going to take his suit, it was said Monday that he did not go there and that no suit belonging to him is there.

Description of Alleged Kidnaper.

Turrisi is described as 24 years old, 5 feet 8 inches tall; he weighs 145 pounds; his hair is light and his complexion fair. He would not be taken for a Sicilian, but looks more like the blond type which prevails in Northern Italy. He wore a black shirt, dark blue trousers and black soft hat. In the suitcase which he took from the Viviano home was a blue serge suit.

Grace Viviano has curly black hair, while her cousin, Alfonso, is of the blond type. He has full cheeks and light blue eyes. The striking contrast between the complexion of the children is relied upon to impress anyone who sees them and aid in the capture of the kidnaper.

A law passed by the last legislature makes life imprisonment the penalty for abducting children and holding them for ransom.

Twice within the last year and a half attempts have been made to blow up with dynamite the Viviano brothers' store at 515 Biddle street.

The first effort was made in February, when an explosion in the cellar area-way blew out the plate-glass front of the building and wrecked a portion of the stock.

Two weeks later Vito Viviano, one of the brothers, received a "Black Hand" note demanding money.

He went to the appointed rendezvous and gave a man who met him there a check for $75. Pietro Cipriano was arrested and identified as the man to whom he gave the money, but he refused to prosecute Cipriano, saying that he was afraid of the vengeance which might be meted out to him by the "Black Hand."

Pressed by the police to prefer a charge of extortion against Cipriano and appear as a witness against him, Viviano said that the money which he gave Cipriano was "just a loan."

Domenico Lumetta, a grocer, also identified Cipriano as the man to whom he had given $200 after he had received a "Black Hand" letter. When he was taken to the Carr Street Station to confront Cipriano he trembled and said that he had merely loaned the money to Cipriano.

As neither Viviano nor Lumetta would prosecute, Cipriano was released by the police.

Last January the store of the Viviano brothers was again blown up with dynamite, which was placed in the basement and exploded in such a way that the front of the building was wrecked.

The Legislature of Missouri recently passed a law naming life imprisonment as the penalty for kidnaping. It was signed by Gov. Hadley and is now in force.

SWEDISH LABOR WAR LOOKS LIKE A REVOLUTION

Strikes and Lockouts Have Made More Than 100,000 Men Idle in Stockholm.

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 3.—A labor war throughout Sweden that is scheduled to begin tomorrow threatens to develop in Stockholm into something approaching a miniature revolution. The trouble will be enormously aggravated by the present general strike and lockout.

The members of the Young Socialists party re striving to give the movement a revolutionary character and the Government, warned that a political campaign is going on at the same time, has taken steps to nip the expected disorders in the bud. The authorities have decided, at the first signs of insurrection, to declare Stockholm in a state of siege.

Soldiers are geing quartered in different sections of the city and suburbs, and the entire standing army of Sweden is ready.

The situation has suddenly taken so serious a turn that King Gustave has summoned the members of Parliament to Stockholm, and a special session of the Rigsdag is expected.

It is expected that the present total of about 100,000 idle workmen will be largely increased tomorrow. It is anticipated also that the cab and street-car services in Stockholm will stop running, and arrangements are being made to run the waterworks and the electric-light plants by soldiers.

The bridges leading to the islands adjacent to Stockholm are closely guarded this afternoon. Many stores already have been closed, and no milk is being delivered in the city. The sale of spirits, beer and wine has been prohibited.

The labor conflict that is at the bottom of this trouble originated in a dispute over wages in the woolen and cotton industries. In the beginning 13,000 men were locked out and other industries since have become involved until yesterday the Employers' Federation declared a lockout of the iron foundry hands, numbering about 30,000. A total of 80,000 men were reported locked out yesterday and their numbers are increasing rapidly.

Thaw Incoherent in Reply to Jerome's Fire of Questions

reply was invariably made to the authorities at Matteawan.

Doctor Calls Thaw Insane.

Dr. Amos T. Baker, first assistant physician at Matteawan, was on the stand for some time before Thaw was called. He told in detail of Thaw's life at Matteawan and declared the young millionaire was treated exactly as other inmates. He said he regarded Thaw as "irrational."

"I consider you a very important witness, doctor," said Justice Mills, turning to Dr. Baker as both sides concluded. "Now what exactly are you positive about? Is it this? That you have reached from a study of this case and observation a firm, full conclusion that this man is insane or is it that you have not had an opportunity to study that problem and reach such a firm, positive, definite conclusion?"

Mr. Morschauser objected, holding that an answer would qualify Dr. Baker as an expert. Justice Mills directed an answer.

Calls Thaw Insane.

Dr. Baker had the question repeated. He replied that Thaw's condition, from the examination read, would lead to a conclusion of insanity.

"But would you say you have reached a firm, full conclusion?" pressed the Court.

"No, sir, I would not."

"Why not?"

"Because he won't answer questions and submit to an examination."

"He seemed to have answered quite well during the first three months there?"

"Yes, that is true."

Jerome then called Thaw to the stand to identify some letters.

"Now, after all these questions, what is your present judgment of Mr. Thaw?"

"Insane," declared Dr. Baker.

"With your present limited examination of Thaw which you admit, would you say it would be dangerous to allow him at large?"

"Yes, sir, I would say so," firmly declared the witness.

"That is all," followed Justice Mills.

ZEPPELIN II BREAKS PROPELLER

Airship Gives Up Second Attempt to Reach Cologne.

FRANKFORT, Aug. 3.—The airship Zeppelin II left here today for Cologne, a distance of 110 miles, but was obliged to return on account of an accident to her machinery. She had gone but a short distance when one of her propeller blades broke and another worked loose and fell to the ground.

The airship descended at the same place whence it had started. This is the second unsuccessful attempt the airship has made to reach Cologne.

CHARGING FRAUD, AMATEUR SLEUTH JAILS A BANKER

St. Joseph (Mo.) Physician Declares His Mother-in-Law Lost $100,000.

PUEBLO, Colo., Aug. 3.—After acting as his own detective in following N. J. Cuddy, an Oklahoma banker, from St. Joseph, Mo., and hiring private detectives when he lost the trail, Frank Hendrickson, a St. Joseph physician, caused the banker's arrest here on a charge of fraudulently obtaining $100,000 from Mrs. A. C. Richardson, Hendrickson's mother-in-law.

Lee M. Gray, an attorney of Hennessy, Ok., was with Cuddy when he was arrested, and declares Hendrickson's action is due to his chagrin at not receiving a larger share of Mrs. Richardson's estate when she died.

Mrs. Richardson died in Pueblo three weeks ago. While she lived in St. Joseph she ordered Cuddy to bring to her $30,000 of the money which she had deposited in the bank at Hennessy, of which Cuddy was head. Hendrickson charges that Cuddy brought inacceptable paper instead of the cash his mother-in-law ordered.

Hendrickson, unawares to Cuddy, accompanied him when he left St. Joseph on a train at 4 a. m., but the banker eluded the amateur sleuth while en route. Hendrickson then engaged detectives in the chase, which, he declares, took them across the country.

A Sheriff from Kingfisher, Ok., is on his way here to take Cuddy into custody. Hendrickson declares the First National Bank of Kansas City and several individuals are so anxious to see Cuddy that they have offered $30,000 for information as to his whereabouts.

JAMES G. BLAINE'S FORMER PUPIL DIES IN ST. LOUIS

Chapman S. Charlot Had Long Been Identified With Local Banking Interests.

Arrangements for the funeral of Chapman S. Charlot, for many years connected with banking interests in St. Louis, who died Monday at the home of his son, Frederick S. Charlot, in University City, will not be announced until the arrival of another son, W. B. Charlot, of Chicago.

Mr. Charlot's death was due to the infirmities of his advanced age. He was born near Zanesville, O., Sept. 22, 1829, and served in the Northern army during the Civil War. He was Major and Assistant Adjutant-General, and was breveted for galantry on the field. He was a member of the G. A. R., Legion of Honor, Masons and Royal Arcanum.

He was a pupil of James G. Blaine at the Kentucky Military Institute, and Blaine's name is signed to the diploma Mr. Charlot received from that school. He came to St. Louis in 1852 and became a teller in the banking house of Lucas & Simon. He was later teller in the Bank of the State of Missouri, cashier of the Second National Bank and assistant cashier of the Commercial Bank, with which he was connected at the time of his retirement from active business 10 years ago.

Besides his two sons he is survived by his wife and daughter, Mrs. M. F. Engman.

SCHOOL FOR TUBERCULAR CHILDREN OPENS; 30 ATTEND

Tented City Maintained for "Physically Subnormal" Pupils of Chicago.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—Chicago is the first city in the United States to open a school for tubercular children, maintained and supported by the Board of Education.

This novel school, which will resemble a tented city, was opened this morning on the grounds of the Harvard School, Seventy-fifth street and Vincennes avenue. The Board of Education will supply tents, grounds, equipment and teaching services, while the Chicago Tuberculosis Institute will furnish food, transportation and medical services.

The school opened with 30 pupils, selected from a large group of so-called "physically subnormal children," after a careful examination to determine those best fit to make the experiment.

MEXICO WANTS ROOSEVELT AS AN AMBASSADOR

CITY OF MEXICO, Aug. 3.—Residents of the American colony here and foreigners generally have signed a petition, addressed to President Taft, asking him to appoint Theodore Roosevelt Ambassador to Mexico when Ambassador Thompson retires from his post here a few months hence. The petition is said to have been forwarded by mail to Washington.

The document sets forth that the Mexican post would afford Mr. Roosevelt rest and recreation on his return from his African expedition, that the prosperity of Mexico would be enhanced and the interests of American business men here advanced.

The position of Minister to Mexico, it is pointed out, is second in importance to that of no country to which the United States sends ambassadors.

To show that Mexicans are friendly to the Roosevelt proposal the signatures of prominent Mexican residents of this city are appended, although the petition is stated to be primarily from the English-speaking residents.

GIRL HURT TRYING TO LEAP 4-FOOT FENCE ON WAGER

Miss Clara Frein's skirt caught on a four-foot picket fence, over which she was leaping in an impromptu athletic contest near her home at Smithton, Ill., eight miles south of Belleville, and, as she fell, a picket wounded her left leg, cutting it to the bone.

Miss Frein was kept in bed Tuesday and will be an invalid for a week longer. Her chief suffering has been from loss of blood, her wound having been unattended for almost two hours.

She is the daughter of Henry Frein, Mayor of Smithton and porprietor of a large creamery there. With a number of athletically inclined girl friends, she was at the home of a neighbor named Benedict, when one of the girls proposed a trial of skill in high jumping. Two of the girls cleared the four-foot fence by agile leaps.

"I'll bet I can do that," said Miss Frein, and ran to make the leap. She jumped as high as the others had done, but did not gather in her skirt with sufficient care, and fell upon the picket.

ATTEMPT MADE TO WRECK TRAIN WITH $250,000

CRAWFORD, Neb., Aug. 3.—As a passenger train on the Burlington was rounding a hazardous curve for the station of Belmont, 10 miles out from Crawford, early yesterday morning, Engineer Wade discovered on the track a few rods ahead an obstruction composed of steel rails. The engineer immediately reversed and the train came to a stop within a few feet of the pile of steel rails, which had been placed across the rails on which the train was running.

It is said that the express car contained $250,000 in gold bullion billed to New York City.

A farmer by the name of Chris Berger was found near the vicinity by a searching party, who alighted from the train, and was taken into Alliance, where he was placed in jail.

Berger claims to have had nothing to do with the job, and says he was at this point for the express purpose of flagging the train to get into Alliance for medical aid. Berger has a badly torn arm, caused, he says, by the accidental discharge of a shotgun.

CHEAPER TALK BY TELEPHONE FOR ST. LOUIS

Bell Company Planning General Reduction for Service in the City.

Residents of St. Louis and some of the adjacent territory are about to enjoy cheaper telephone rates. The Bell company is preparing a schedule of rates for city service, and a cut already has been made by both companies, the Bell taking the initiative, in the toll rate between St. Louis and Alton.

President Cyrus P. Walbridge of the Bell Telephone Co. of Missouri told a Post-Dispatch reporter Tuesday that within two or three weeks his company will put into effect new rates for St. Louis, lower than those charged at present.

"All I can say definitely just now," said Mr. Walbridge, "is that the revision will be downward. We are working on the new schedule, but are not yet ready to make an announcement as to what the rates will be. The revision committee is taking the matter up point by point. It is a considerable task, but will be completed, I think, before the end of August."

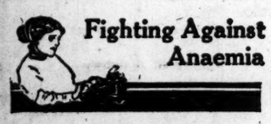

Mr. Walbridge says that, so far as he knows, the new schedule will not affect long-distance tolls.

No Change by Kinloch.

H. L. Reber, secretary and general manager of the Kinloch Telephone Co., was asked Tuesday if his company contemplated any revision of rates. He said:

"The rates charged by the Kinloch Telephone Co. now are as low as they can consistently be made for the service rendered. We feel that the Bell company's announcement of a prospective reduction of their rates is simply an admission that they have been overcharging the public for years. They now and for a quarter of a century have been charging $125 to $150 for business telephones, a service that the Kinloch renders for $72.

"Our residence rates are also cheaper than theirs, although the number of telephones has been multiplied many times over since the Kinloch entered the field. Then there were 3000 telephones in St. Louis. Now the two companies have 75,000. If the Bell company meets our rate the public will get connections, for the same charge, with 25 times more phones than they did when the Bell had no competition."

A Medicine That Does Not Cost Anything Unless It Cures

If you suffer from constipation in any form whatever, acute or chronic, we will guarantee to supply you medicine that will surely effect a cure if taken with regularity and according to directions for a reasonable length of time. Should the medicine fail to benefit you to your entire satisfaction, we promise that it shall cost you nothing.

No other remedy can be compared with Rexall Orderlies for the easy, pleasant and successful treatment of constipation. The active medicinal ingredients of this remedy which is odorless, tasteless and colorless, is an entirely new discovery. Combined with other extremely valuable ingredients, it forms a perfect bowel regulator, intestinal invigorator and strengthener. Rexall Orderlies are notable for their agreeableness to the palate and gentleness of action. They do not cause griping or any disagreeable effect or inconvenience, and may be taken at any time of day or night.

We particularly recommend Rexall Orderlies for children, delicate or aged persons because they do not contain anything that could possibly injure the most delicate organism. They are just as easy to take as candy, and unlike other preparations for a like purpose they do not create a habit, but instead they overcome the cause of habit acquired through the use of ordinary laxatives, cathartics and harsh physics, and permanently remove the cause of constipation or irregular bowel action.

We want you to try Rexall Orderlies at our risk. We know that there is nothing that will do you so much good, and we will refund your money without argument if they do not do as we say they will. They are prepared in tablet form in two sizes of packages; 36 tablets, 25c, and 12 tablets, 10c. Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., 6th and Washington.

SENATE TO VOTE ON TARIFF BILL THURSDAY P. M.

Reach Unanimous Agreement on Motion of Senator Bailey of Texas.

WANTS FREE BAGGING

Senator Culberson Serves Notice That He Will Introduce an Amendment.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—The tariff conference report will be voted upon in the Senate at 2 p. m. Thursday. An agreement to this effect was reached today at 12.30 o'clock at the conclusion of a speech by Senator Clapp. The unanimous consent agreement was reached upon motion of Senator Bailey.

No sooner had the Senate convened today than the members were reminded of yesterday's disturbance over the leather schedule of the tariff bill. The subject was introduced by Mr. Culberson who, referring to the decision of the Conference Committee to bring in a joint resolution remodeling the leather provision, gave notice that when the time came he would present an amendment putting cotton bagging on the free list.

Without attempting to enter into a discussion of the subject, Mr. Culberson reminded senators that the Senate already had taken action on a similar proposition, and he intimated that it would be no stretch of conscience to repeat the former action.

Republicans Seem Confident.

The decision of yesterday with reference to leather had a reassuring effect, as was made evident by the placid countenances of the Republican leaders when they entered the Senate chamber today. Senator Aldrich expressed confidence that the bill now would go through without further difficulty and even the so-called "range" senators, who have been the most ardent advocates of a duty on hides, were inclined to join in this expression of confidence.

While not entirely pleased with the face that leather and leather goods are to receive any protection, they were not unmindful of the concession that had been made and for the first time announced their respective intentions of voting for the bill.

A few of the "insurgents" were still displeased, but it was evident that most of them would also fall into line on the final round-up.

The tariff commission clause of the bill, as changed by the conferees, became a subject of much explanation when Mr. Newlands arose and questioned the chairman of the Finance Committee concerning the paragraph.

Full Power for President.

Asked whether that provision would empower the President to learn the cost of production of manufactured articles at home and abroad, Mr. Aldrich replied that in his judgment the provision would not only do that but was actually broaders in its authority than the Senate paragraph which it replaced.

"It authorizes the President to employ whomsoever he pleases without limit, and to assign to them such duties as he sees fit within the limitation of the maximum and minimum provisions," he said.

"Will the inquiries of the committee cover the cost of production at home and abroad?" inquired Mr. Newlands.

"Unquestionably they will, and that involves a great many collateral questions," replied Mr. Aldrich.

Mr. Aldrich added that he betrayed no confidence by saying that his views and those of the President were similar on the provision under discussion. Replying further to questions, Mr. Aldrich said he believed Congress would not fall fully to supply the President with appropriations to carry out the authority to ascertain all facts deemed necessary by him concerning the operation of the maximum and minimum rates provision.

RELIEF EXPEDITION STARTS WITH SUPPLIES FOR PEARY

ST. JOHNS, Newfoundland, Aug. 3.—The expedition which will carry relief supplies to Commander Robert E. Peary leaves St. Johns today. The 88-ton schooner Jeannie will take 50 tons of coal and the same amount of stores which she will land at Etah, Greenland, to supplement the supplies on Peary's steamer Roosevelt.

The schooner will not remain long at Etah. If Commander Peary is not there the Jeannie will sail as soon as she discharges her cargo, bringing any dispatches Peary may have left.

Capt. Bartett will inquire for Dr. Frederick A. Cook of Brooklyn, N. Y., who went to look for the pole several years ago and who has been missing several months. If Dr. Cook is at Etah he will be brought back on the schooner, as will Harry Whitney, who went on Peary's steamer to spend the winter hunting oxen in Greenland.

M'LURE SUES FOR ACCOUNTING

The recent sale by the Bank of Commerce and Bronx Investment Co. of property at Edgewood, St. Louis County, belonging to Charles D. McLure, to Mrs. Lamira W. Kehlor, has caused a suit for an accounting to be filed in the Circuit Court, by McLure against the bank and the investment company.

The property was sold under two deeds of trust, one held by Jerre B. Moberly on a note for $33,000 and the other held by the bank on a note for $42,897.72. McLure says he reduced the indebtedness by the payment of a sum aggregating $37,000.

WIFE GLAD SHE SHOT MAN AS HE PACKED HIS GRIP

Would Rather See Him Dead Than Have Him Leave Her, Woman Says.

WOUNDED THREE TIMES

Pursued Him Through Rooming House and to Street, Where He Falls.

Although she professes to love her husband, Harry Stelliges, an amateur pugilist, better than her own life, Mrs. Georgetta Rose Stelliges, a prisoner at the Manchester Avenue Police Station, said Tuesday that she was glad she shot him three times at their home, 2203 Locust street.

"He was packing a grip to go away Monday," she said, "and I would rather see him dead than to have him leave me. If I had it all to do over again I would not act differently."

Stelliges, who is at the City Hospital, tried to escape the frenzied woman by running. The first shot was fired in their second-floor front room. She shot him again as he started downstairs and wounded him again in the yard. A fourth shot, just before he toppled over at the curbstone, missed its mark.

Married Five Years.

She is 26 years old. Mrs. Stelliges declares his junior. They have been married nearly five years.

She worked for three weeks, she told a Post-Dispatch reporter, and has done nothing since. She continued in her factory position for a long time and then became a waitress.

Monday he wanted money and she didn't have it, she said. He became angry and said he was going to leave her.

She left the house for a time and when she returned he was packing a suitcase.

"I ran to a dresser drawer and got my revolver," she said. "I fired the first time as he stood in front of an open trunk taking out his clothes. That shot struck him in the left shoulder, right at the shoulder blade.

"He ran through a door into the hall. I shot again. The bullet struck him in the left foot. He ran through the hall and downstairs. I followed. Just outside the door I shot again."

Wrongfully Accused, He Says.

Stelliges told a Post-Dispatch reporter at the City Hospital that he was leaving home because his wife had accused him wrongfully of paying attention to other women. He was going to the home of his parents, 3109 Thomas street.

The wound in the shoulder is the most serious and the hospital doctors say it is not dangerous.

HARRIMAN UNDER THE CARE OF NOTED SPECIALIST IN VIENNA

Railroad Magnate and His Family Have Two Floors in Cottage Sanitarium.

VIENNA, Aug. 3.—E. H. Harriman with his family arrived yesterday from Gastein and proceeded immediately to a cottage sanitarium in a residential suburb of Vienna, where two floors had been engaged.

Mr. Harriman will be treated by Carl Noorden, profession of influential medicine in the University of Vienna, who is generally recognized as the greatest authority in Europe in his own department of medical science, especially on subjects relating to dietetics.

Mr. Harriman will remain some days and possibly three or four weeks under Dr. Noorden's care.

NEW "LINCOLN" PENNIES DELIGHT MANY CHILDREN

Crowd So Great at U. S. Subtreasury That Sale of Coins Is Stopped.

Did you get any of the new "Lincoln" pennies at the U. S. Subtreasury, little boy and little girl?

If you didn't dozens of little boys and girls did. They crowded into the Subtreasury offices in the Federal building by the dozens, all seeking the bright new pennies of which they had read. They wanted the pennies in all amounts.

"Dimme a penny's wurf," some small lad or lassie would ask, and then a newsboy, intending to sell the pennies along with papers at a greatly advanced price, would buy a quarter's worth, a half dollar's worth or perhaps a whole dollar's worth.

Harry R. Flory, coin teller at the Subtreasury, began to think that all the little boys and girls in St. Louis were there to get the pennies. So large did the crowds become, nobody but the children could get to the coin teller's window, so Subtreasurer Whitelaw finally ordered that the issuance of the pennies be stopped. There were many disappointed youngsters when that announcement was made, for the press of children was so great that scores had no opportunity to buy their pennies before the sale was stopped.

BEQUESTS FOR ST. LOUISANS IN THE WILL OF IRONMASTER

Louis Philip Ewald Leaves Estate Said to Considerably Exceed $500,000.

Bequests to St. Louis people are contained in the will of Louis Philip Ewald, iron master, who was buried here today. The estate is worth considerably in excess of $500,000. To three children here, Philip, Helen and Sterling, the sum of $300,000 is bequeathed, according to a news telegram to the Post-Dispatch from Louisville, Ky., where the will was filed for probate.

Rosa E. Damon, Julia E. Toohey, Ann Ewald, Katharine Ewald, J. Howard Ewald and Harry F. Ewald, sisters and brothers, living here receive $15,000 each, provided they do not attempt to break the will.

The St. Louis Union Trust Co. is named to handle the St. Louis end of the estate, as Mr. Ewald had iron works in Louisville and St. Louis. The Columbia Trust Co. of Louisville is named as executor of the estate, of which no inventory is to be made.

JOY RIDE ENDS SUDDENLY WHEN AUTOMOBILE HITS WALL

Machine Is Wrecked, Occupants Hurt and Owner Declares He Will Prosecute.

A "joy ride" by two garage employes in a three-seated roadster belonging to Charles Cunningham of Pechmann's Hotel ended when the machine "skidded," crashed through a fence and was wrecked against the brick wall of a vacant house at the northeast corner of Grand avenue and Pine street at 6 a. m. Tuesday.

The men in the auto were Allen Devoto of 4521 Kennerly avenue, night foreman of the Bagnell Garage, 4155 Olive street, and Fred Noach, a brass polisher employed at the garage.

Noach was lacerated slightly about the head, and Devoto was bruised.

As they clambered out of the wrecked car, policemen, who had heard the crash, seized them. They were sent to the Manchester Avenue Police Station.

Cunningham, owner of the car, told the police that he had not given permission for his auto to be used and that he would prosecute the "joy riders."

"Spring Time Is Ring Time."

You may have that Diamond at once and pay weekly or monthly. Loftis Bros. & Co., Carleton Bldg., 6th and Olive, second floor, Opposite Barr's.

Two Lives Lost for a Hat.

PARIS, Aug. 3.—A passenger's hat blew off into a reservoir just outside St. Laurent Station. A man on the platform reached after it and fell in. The station master plunged after him, but both men were drowned.

CORONER HOLDS THAT BRIDE, 22, KILLED HERSELF

After an inquest into the death of Mrs. Georgia Yeomans, a bride 22 years of age, the Coroner's verdict was that she committed suicide. Mrs. Yeomans died at 3122 Lucas avenue at 8:30 p. m. Monday.

An autopsy was ordered by the Coroner to determine what poison she took. The mother, sister and brother-in-law of Mrs. Yeomans testified at the inquest that she had been married but a few months. They said her husband left two weeks ago, and that they do not now know where he is.

The Coroner did not bring out clearly the cause of the suicide. Mrs. Adelaide Carolston, mother of Mrs. Yeomans, and Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Kelly, brother-in-law and sister, said she had been in ill-health for a long time.

Mrs. Louisa Tally, a roomer, testified that Mrs. Yeomans attempted to commit suicide July 4 by taking carbolic acid, but failed because she did not have enough poison.

PACKERS TO GO IF CITY WON'T LEAVE THEIR SMELLS ALONE

Companies Are Angered at Health Commissioner's Meddling With Odors at Plant.

Mayor Kreismann is trying to pacify St. Louis packers, who have been angry since Health Commissioner Bond objected to the smell from the plants of the St. Louis Dressed Beef Co. and the Independent Packing Co. The Mayor has assured the packers that the Health Department will not require of them any but practicable improvements in their plants.

Several packers waited on the Mayor Monday afternoon. They said they would be forced to leave the city if the regulation of their plants was too stringent.

The packers contend that odors are unavoidable and do not indicate lack of sanitation.

OFFICIAL WHO ORDERED KILLING MUST EXPLAIN

Investigation Will Be Made Into Wood River Shooting Today.

SAYS HE WAS UNARMED

"Big Steve," in Antemortem Statement, Gives New Version of Affair.

Coroner C. N. Streeper of Alton told a Post-Dispatch reporter Tuesday that he would go to Wood River and make a thorough investigation of the shooting of Stephen Dimeda, who died at 12:30 a. m. in St. Joseph's Hospital, Alton, from a bullet wound inflicted Sunday night by William Varney, who says he shot when ordered to do so by Police Magistrate J. T. Ashlock because Dimeda was about to shoot Ashlock.

At the inquest Tuesday evening it is expected that several witnesses will be examined as to the events immediately preceding the shooting.

Dimeda made an ante-mortem statement to Assistant State's Attorney William Wilson, in which he declared that he was not armed, as Dr. Ashlock and Varney allege, and that the quarrel began over his refusal to pay for drinks in Varney's saloon for Varney, Ashlock and several other men.

"Big Steve:" Steve Bigg.

Dimeda, who was an Austrian, weighing 280 pounds, was known as "Big Steve," which the Germans reversed, calling him "Steve Bigg," so that most Americans who knew him thought his surname was Bigg.

Through Interpreter Antone Rohe of Benbow City the dying man told the assistant State's Attorney that he went into Varney's saloon and laid down a dime, all the money he had, for a drink.

Several other men, he said, including Varney and Ashlock, drank at the same time, and Varney demanded 30 cents more. Dimeda protested that he had not ordered drinks for the party, he said, and this precipitated the trouble which led to the shooting.

Denies Drink Story.

Dr. Ashlock denies the story about Dimeda being asked to pay for the drinks. He said to a Post-Dispatch reporter:

"I was in Varney's saloon about 11 o'clock, and 'Big Steve' was sitting there. He had been drinking. He asked me to lend him a dollar. I told him I couldn't. After a little he asked for the loan of a quarter. He said, 'You rich man; you got plenty money.' I refused to let him have the quarter, and he became abusive and called me names.

"I saw the handle of his revolver sticking out of his pocket and told him to shove it down out of sight. He put his hand on the handle of the weapon, became angry, and ran out of the saloon, pulling out his gun and whirling it around his head. He said, 'I'll shoot you when I come back.'

"Steve came back in a few minutes and was abusive again. Tony Grundon and Varney told me to take his gun away from him, using my authority as police magistrate. I suggested that I would take Steve home. He said, 'Yes, I'll go with you.'

Went Toward Home.

"We went into the woods in the direction of his home. When close to his house he said he would go the rest of the way alone, and I left him, intending to go to my home. I saw Steve skulking in the weeds and hiding behind a wall. I went back to Varney's saloon then and warned Varney and Grundon that Steve might come back, as he had threatened.

"I then ran to the door, and in the moonlight saw Steve aiming his gun at the saloon. I said, 'Varney, I deputize you to go around by the bridge and help me get the gun away from him. I'll arrest him for carrying concealed weapons.'

"I went up to 'Big Steve' and took him by each arm, putting my cane, which I use to walk with, under one of my arms. I could not reach my own gun while I held him in this way. He struggled, and pointed his revolver at me, and when I saw Varney coming up, I told Varney to shoot, and he did."

Varney Tells Same Story.

Varney, when told what Dr. Ashlock had said, replied: "That's right. Ashlock deputized me to go and help him take the gun from the man. I saw the flash of the gun in the moonlight as he held it pointed at Ashlock. Then, when Ashlock told me to fire, I did so."

Ashlock said that in addition to himself, Varney, Grundon and Dimeda, there were four other men in the saloon when the trouble started. It is said there were no witnesses to the actual shooting except Ashlock.

Mrs. Annie Billow of Wood River is a sister of Dimeda, who leaves a widow and two children in Austria.

Varney was taken to Edwardsville Monday afternoon and placed under bond of $1000, which Ashlock signed.

$10,000 VERDICT HELD TOO HIGH

Court Orders Remittitur in Judgment Against United Railways.

Judge Kinsey in the Circuit Court announced Monday that unless Thomas W. Warrington, who obtained a verdict for $10,000 against the United Railways, agrees to a remittitur of $4500 of the amount, a new trial will be granted to the street car company. Morrison was hurt June 7, 1908, when a Creve Coeur car left the track at a curve near Delmar Garden, and sued for $12,000.

The jurors returned a verdict for $10,000 in his favor and an additional $800 for the physicians who treated him, but they were sent back to correct the verdict, being instructed that the physicians were not parties to the suit. They then voted the entire sum in favor of Morrison. The United Railways claimed [illegible] excessive.

AEROPLANE WRECKED IN TEST FOR CANADIAN GOVERNMENT

McCurdy and Baldwin Break Dominion Records Before They Are Thrown to Ground.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Aug. 3.—The aeroplane Silver Dart, with which many good flights were made at Baddeck, Nova Scotia, last winter, was wrecked at Petawawa military camp yesterday during trial flights for the Canadian Government. It had made four successful flights of approximately half a mile each, attaining a speed of more than forty miles an hour, which is a record for Canadian flights.

On landing from the fourth flight the sun shone in the eyes of the aviators, J. A. D. McCurdy and W. W. Baldwin, and just as they were about to land, the machine struck a knoll, ricocheting and striking again with sufficient force to wreck the wings and control apparatus.

Messrs. McCurdy and Baldwin, who were both in the machine, were slightly scratched and bruised, but are enthusiastic over the performance of the machine.

MILLIONAIRE'S WIFE IS MISSING; CHAUFFEUR, TOO

Mrs. John Cherry Jr. of Jacksonville, Ill., Suddenly Disappears.

MARRIED TWO YEARS

Daughter of Missouri State Official Is Younger Than Husband.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., Aug. 3.—Mrs. John Cherry Jr. left her home in this city Saturday night, and simultaneously Peter Haxton, a chauffeur employed by her husband, left the city. They had been almost constantly thrown in the company of each other for several months.

Mrs. Cherry, who is a handsome brunette 23 years her husband's junior, married him two years ago preceding an action in which Rachel Pierce, a handsome blonde, sued him in Paris, Mo., for maintenance and a money award as his common-law wife. Cherry won the suit on the defense that he had never married Miss Pierce, although he had been with her in Chicago, East St. Louis and other places, and she had borne his name and had been introduced as his wife.

The case excited much interest because the suit was brought in the home town of his young bride. Cherry had bought a 1400-acre farm near Paris, and it was while making visits to it that he met Miss Lina Baskett, the daughter of William R. Baskett, former State Building and Loan Commissioner of Missouri. Miss Baskett was then 20 years old and one of the belles of Missouri.

Bought Motor Car for Wife.

Cherry, who is one of the richest men in Central Illinois, returned to his bride in Jacksonville after the trial and they lived quietly in the elegant home he had built. He lavished money on his young wife and recently bought a large touring car for her.

Cherry, among other of his possessions, owns a large livery stable and when he bought the car he assigned Haxton, who was employed in the stable, to learn to run it and be chauffeur for Mrs. Cherry.

Saturday Mrs. Cherry was driving around town in her car with Haxton at the wheel, and incidentally she drew a large sum of money from a bank. That evening they both disappeared.

Although Cherry appeared to be very fond of his young wife, she was dissatisfied. Though rated as a millionaire, Cherry's birth and peculiar status in the town barred his wife from society. She had been accustomed to much social life in Missouri as a girl, and being excluded from society in Jacksonville she sought other excitement.

Haxton was not regarded highly in the town, and his associates were in no away the equal of Mrs. Cherry.

Does Not Expect Wife to Return.

It is believed that Mrs. Cherry has gone East. Cherry says there was no friction between himself and his wife, but he does not believe that she will return to him, and it is understood that he will bring suit for divorce at once.

Cherry's antecedents were somewhat romantic. He is descended from a family of Portuguese religious refugees who came to Illinois many years ago from the Madeira Islands. His father, John Cherry, called the 'King of the Portuguese," began life as a laborer in Jacksonville. His start in life came when, as a digger in a trench for a foundation of a building, he found a pot of gold coins that had been buried. With this money he bought a team and started as a contractor in a small way.

Old John Cherry, although he could neither read nor write, was an exceedingly shrewd man and soon became a bidder for street paving in the towns in Central and Western Illinois and eventually almost monopolized the business. "Young John," as he is still called, grew up in the business, and, although he, too, is uneducated, he possesses his father's shrewdness and became the "fixer" for the firm.

Was Leader of Colony.

Old John Cherry bought farms and took land in payment for jobs, and started a livery stable and became the leader of the large colony of industrious Portuguese that had settled about the city.

Cherry married one of the Portuguese colonists and finally built one of the finest residences in Jacksonville. But the members of the colony were mostly market gardeners and laborers and he and his wife never went into society of the town.

During the trial at Paris Mrs. Rachel Cherry testified that he drove her past his house one day to show it to her and pointed out his wife on the lawn and said that she was then dying of consumption. It was to this house that he brought Mrs. Lina Baskett Cherry when he had persuaded the petted young Missouri beauty that he could give her everything a woman could desire.

While Mrs. Cherry was young, tall and distinguished looking and very handsome, her husband is short, stout and swarthy, careless in his dress, except for a large diamond he wore in his shirt front, and immersed in his business affairs.

Husband and wife had little in common and Mrs. Cherry was barred from association with women of her kind when she married him and came to live in the big house in Jacksonville, and it was remarked that in spite of the money he lavished on her she was never happy or contented.

A SPEED-MAD WORLD.

The mania for speed besets the world. We reduce everything in the line of transportation to terms of distance and minutes. We want trains that will run still faster. We measure automobile quality by speed and Zeppelin's accomplishments are remarkable not because he flies and steers and has endurance and control, but because he goes fast.

Similarly with aeroplanes. Hardly has it been satisfactorily demonstrated that heavier-than-air machines can fly than we fall to discussing types as adapted to speed. The coming races at Rheims are to determine many things, but the others are all subordinated to speed. Can monoplane beat biplane? Is greater engine power with added weight better than less engine power and lightness to give speed. We read that "Americans are hopeful that Glenn H. Curtiss will win with his doubledecker because he can carry a heavier and speedier motor," and "if he should depend upon his small motor it is almost a foregone conclusion that he would stand about the same chance to win as the sluggish Wright apparatus."

Imagine the Wright apparatus as sluggish at the very conclusion of an official test of over 42 miles an hour with a passenger and the passenger's testimony that some of the time the speed was 80 miles an hour.

But the aeroplane is unfolding new possibilities for the annihilation of space. Development, like that of the motor car, will make 150 or 200 miles through the air possible and even usual. But whatever the outcome, we may be sure that the admiration for the wonder of flying will become immediately secondary to the great desideratum of flying fast. The world is speed-mad.

An expert has defined "a lady's limit." It is five glasses of champagne. When we know beyond a doubt, what is a gentleman's drink, it will be easy for us all to be ladies and gentlemen.

CHICAGO'S MUNICIPAL COWS.

Some kind-hearted citizens of Chicago have given the city three cows, whose milk will be distributed in the crowded districts, under certain conditions, for the purpose of saving the lives of the babies of the very poor.

For a city boasting over 2,000,000 population, the gift of three cows appears to be very inadequate. If this is all the people of Chicago expect to do for the poor babies, they should learn something of the work of the St. Louis Pure Milk Commission, in comparison with which a gift of three cows to a big city like Chicago causes a smile.

The milk used to save the lives of the St. Louis babies comes from dairies that are under the supervision of agents of the Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund. These dairies are spotlessly clean, the milking is under sanitary conditions and the milk is transmitted to the laboratory in sterilized receptacles. It is then prepared according to the prescription of physicians, being modified so as to suit the needs of infants in various stages of sickness or health.

Of this scientifically prepared milk, between 2000 and 3000 bottles are distributed to the poor each day. The cost of this great charity is something like $8000 annually, and each year the need is greater.

The work of child life-saving in a great city is a tremendous, complicated, scientific work—no mere municipal ownership question. Nor can it be solved without an abundant expenditure of money.

The Czar was warmly greeted by King Edward, but every precaution was taken to prevent a warm reception.

ATHLETICS BY ARTIFICIAL LIGHT.

They have an electrically lighted baseball park in Cincinnati, which has been so successful that it is proposed to have nocturnal football.

Is not ahtletic enthusiasm going beyond the bounds of a healthy craze when such inversions of the natural order are not only proposed, but actually practiced? The time for outdoor sports is the day, under the sun, when all the world is in sight, with the encouragements it offers in the forms of fresh and urgent life. To play baseball or football or cricket at night by artificial light is the madness of the craving for artificial delights. The plea is advanced that the sun is too hot. But are the players weaklings, that they shrink from the natural discouragements which are supposed to constitute the discipline of manliness? And surely the fans do not care for the weather. What does an enthusiast known about the weather, whether it is hot or cold?

Athletics by electric light will never do. There ought to be one field of social interest dedicated irrevocably to the natural, and protected

FEMINIZING THE SCHOOLS.

An educational problem is emphasized by the elevation of Mrs. Ella Flagg Young to the superintendency of the Chicago public schools. The appointment is regarded as having significance beyond the mere personal triumph of one woman of exceptional ability. It is the climax of woman's extraordinary progress in taking possession of the field of public school teaching. It indicates the complete feminizing of public school education.

The Post-Dispatch called attention to the great numerical superiority of women over men in the aggregate of public school teachers. In the public schools there are now 358,884 women to 116,354 men teachers. Beginning with the lower grades, where the work was thought to be particularly fitted to her natural sympathies and capacities, woman has taken possession of all the grades of the grammar school. She is rapidly seizing the principalships and she shares evenly the places in the high schools. Now that a woman occupies the highest executive position in the public school system of the second city in the Union the bars are down.

What will be the consequences of the feminizing of public education? What will be its effect upon the men of the future? We have accepted women as teachers of the very young of both sexes without question. We have readily agreed that the influence of women in the kindergarten and the lower grades was as good for the boys as for the girls. But ought boys to have only the influence of women teachers? Will the boy who, during his plastic and susceptible period of life, has nothing but the feminine influence, outlook and training develop into the best type of man? Can the woman alone, with all the subtle, but powerful, differentiation of sex train the mind of strong manhood?

We know that there comes a time in the life of every boy—the time when he is budding from boyhood to manhood—when he revolts from feminine rule and rejects purely feminine ideals. The masculine appeals to him powerfully. The man is striving mightily within him, and he seeks the ideals of strength, endurance, manly prowess, conquest. He begins to be conscious of manly qualities and feels the aspirations and the powers of manhood. At this time he is most sensitive to the influences of others. His teacher, guide, counsellor may mold his character to his will. Strong men have testified to the great influence during this formative period, of men instructors with fine ideals, vigorous qualities and clear views of life. Our greatest teachers have been men. In the main the development of educational methods has been the work of men. Can we afford to have the field of education deserted by men and turned over to the women? Can women take the places of men, not only in maintaining progress in education, but in molding and training men to do the work of the future? These are vital questions in connection with the woman's conquest of the public schools.

The news that the revolutionists of Barcelona have turned from barricade-fighting and church-burning to dancing and bouquet throwing indicate a high order of imagination on the part of the Government news censor.

BACON AND GILGAMESH.

The cipher craze which has addled so many scholarly brains in England and America where it revolves, or rather whirls, about the names of Bacon and Shakspeare, has struck Germany with great force.

Two years ago Prof. P. Jensen of the University of Marburg published an immense volume of 1000 pages, in which he proved that the bulk of the Old Testament, and the sayings and doings of Jesus in the New, are only adaptations from the Babylonian Epic of Gilgamesh. He has now issued another book in which Paul is included. He, too, is nothing else or more than Gilgamesh.

This attempt to upset the learning, faith and tradition of 2000 years is, of course, in the interest of truth and should be commended, and it may be said without fear of successful contradiction that if Bacon wrote Shakspeare's words there is strong probability that Gilgamesh wrote most of the Old and New Testaments. Students of cipher will appreciate and approve this logic.

There is something very inspiring in work of this sort. Many people waste their time reading Shakspeare's plays, when they might with greater profit read the wonderful literature that has grown up around the question of authorship. So of the Bible. Instead of reading Isaiah, the sayings of Jesus, and the remarkable epistles of Paul, we should learn what we can about Gilgamesh.

The model town of Gary has 100 blind pigs—the usual proportion to one blind Mayor.

THE TARIFF VOTE GEOGRAPHICALLY.

Republican opposition to the tariff measure in the House of Representatives came from Minnesota, Wisconsin, North Dakota, Iowa, Kansas, Illinois and Washington. The hostile votes of Keifer of Ohio and Southwick of New York were not symptomatic, marking only personal opposition to particular features.

Six faltering Republicans who changed their votes at the last minute came one each from Wisconsin, Idaho, Kansas and Nebraska and two from Iowa.

No one can consider the vote geographically without being impressed by its reflection of the true feelings of the great Northwestern and Middle Western States. Every Representative from Minnesota voted against the bill and the Senators from that State are indefatigable in their insurgency. Four Iowa Representatives followed Dolliver and Cummins in their opposition.

It requires courage for a congressman to defy the party organization unless he is sure of support at home. There are clear instances where the organization triumphed over home sentiment and the whip, cracking close at hand, was a superior argument to the fear of explanations that can be deferred.

But there is no doubt of popular hostility to high tariffs in the great group of states comprising Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota, the Dakotas, Kansas and Nebraska. Those States now have 66 Republican and 21 Democratic Representatives. Of the latter, eleven are from Indiana and six from Illinois, while Indiana is the only one with a Democratic senator. They have been the strongholds of Republicanism.

Is their opposition to the Payne bill insignificant? Is it a mere passing defection to be speed- growing to unanimity in opposition to fundamental Republican doctrine? In six months, according to Congressman McKinley, the tariff will be forgotten. Is that statement the outpouring of conviction or mere party braggadocio?

It is not surprising that a joker has been found in the tariff bill. The whole scheme is a huge practical joke on the American people and one more little jest is no great matter. But the incident should stimulate thought, and lead to an exposure of the whole trick. The tariff is a confidence game which has been played so often that the sharpers think it will always "go." They may play it once too often.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

The Merchants' Tax.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In your issue of Aug. 1, 1909, there appeared an article headed "New Tax Will Drive Out the Grain Firms—Commission Merchant Declares This Will Be Effect of Alt's License System." This heading, aside from the article itself is misleading and incorrect, as it insinuates that I have an individual license system. I beg leave to refute the insinuation; and I challenge anyone to show where I have in any case during my incumbency of this office inaugurated a system of my own to assess or collect license taxes. Every act of mine has been based upon the laws governing this office as I construe them, and whenever I have felt it necessary to ask for assistance in placing the proper construction upon them, I have never hesitated to call upon the City Counselor for aid and advice, which has always been cheerfully given. As to the statement of Mr. Marshall Hall of the W. L. Green Commission Co. to your correspondent that this office is demanding a merchant's license and a commission merchant's license from grain men, I wish to say that this office can only collect from them what they justly owe the city under the law, be it merchant's of commission merchant's license, or both, and to that end I will do my utmost, knowing it to be my duty to do so. You will greatly oblige me by publishing the above in an early edition of your paper.

Tax Monopoly.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I wish to thank you for your editorial on "Penalizing Business." It is to the point and ought to do much good in showing the business man the way out. By all means, let us get our taxes where the monopolist gets his pile; tax land values. This is the way we should go.

ALEX VEITCH.

Awake, Ye Patriots!

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

After attending Thursday night's band concert at Forest Park I can no longer refrain from a howl. What sort of citizens do the people of St. Louis set themselves up to be? During the playing of the "Star-Spangled Banner" at the close of the concert, in a hasty survey of the spectators I saw—at a conservative estimate—a hundred people squatted on the grass and on benches, seemingly entirely oblivious of the fact that a national anthem was being played. Does St. Louis own a set of nincompoops for citizens, or were these visitors? It might not be so surprising to see a man who hailed from the backwoods and who had never heard a patriotic air remain seated with his hat on. But when one looks around and sees people who ought to know better sticking fast to their benches with their hats clamped tightly on their vacuous craniums, he wishes there was some sort of a law in the United States to compel the observation of some, at least, of the laws of common decency!

DISGUSTED.

Silliness of Some Women.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

"Hurrah, and three cheers" for Mrs. J. T. Martin, because she is one woman in this big city who is not afraid to voice her opinion on "Dogs, With Their Mammas and Papas." I formerly lived in a neighborhood where the children came first, but here it is the reverse—dogs and cats, the babies last, if at all. I know of one woman in particular that has dogs, cats, and last, but not least, rabbits. Here are some of the things sometimes heard: "Come kiss your mamma good-by." Come to your mamma, hun." "Bless your dear, sweet heart," "You old, sweet thing," and "Mamma's poor darling." This same woman has a husband, but no children adorn her home. What do you think when people have to stomach that every day? I am no enemy of said animals, but say keep them in their places.

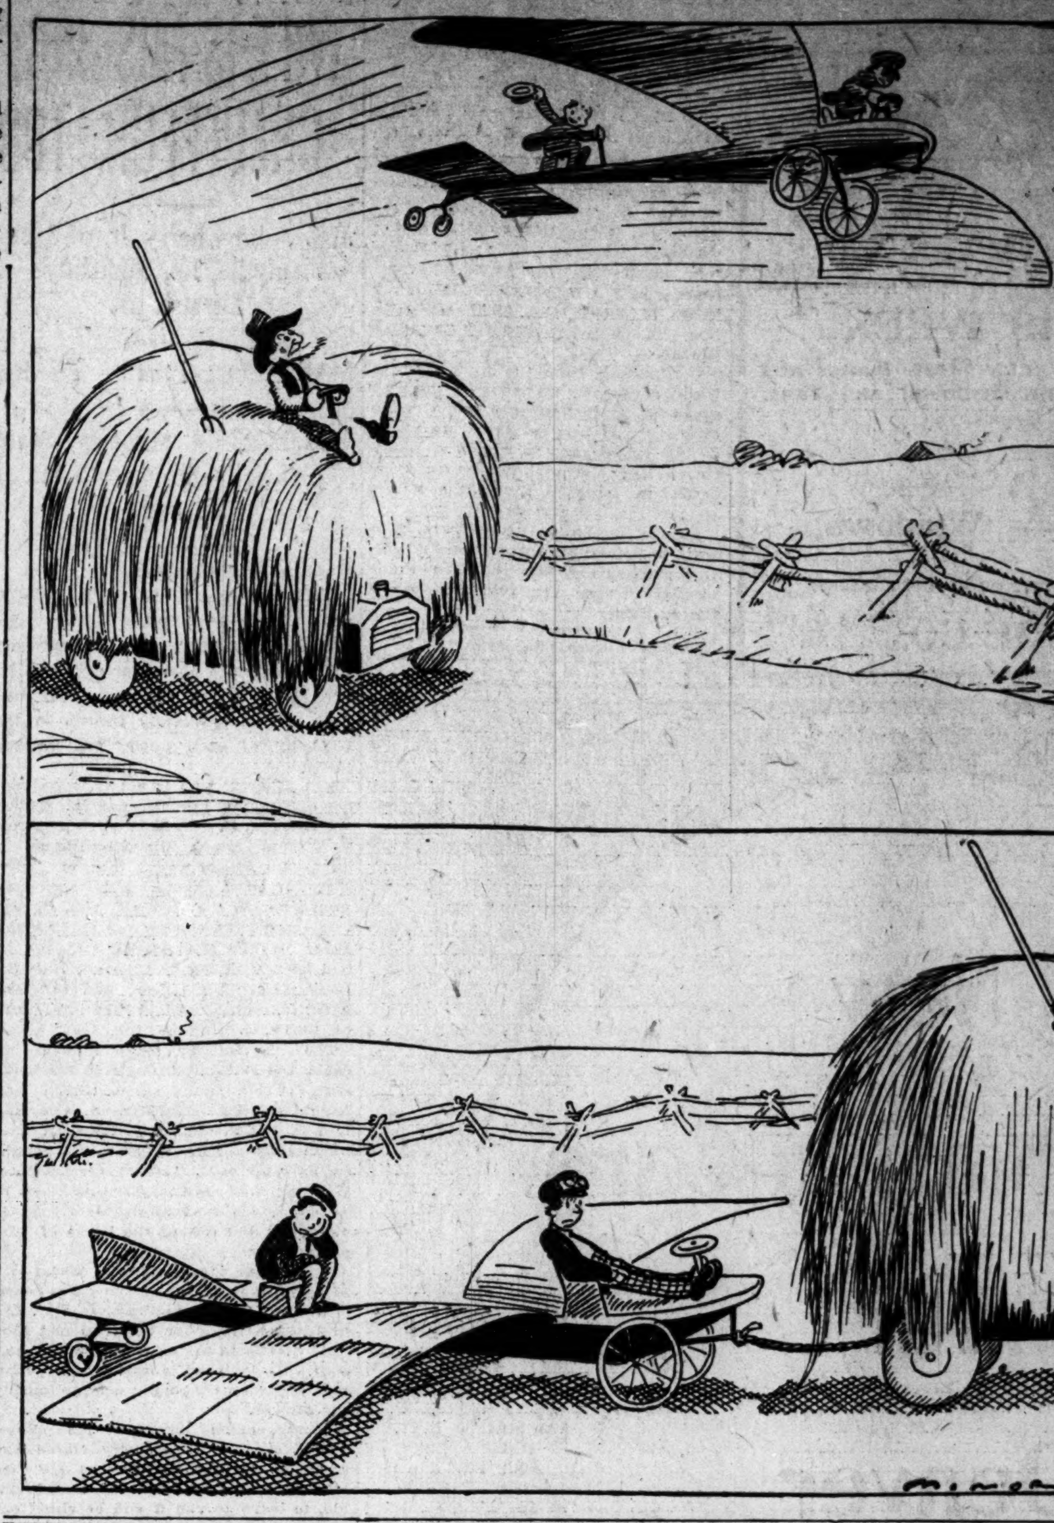

MRS. W. W.

Organize to Fight Tyranny.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

By reason of your editorial interest in the subject I wrote you about yesterday, viz.: the duress methods of treating persons charged with crime, I desire herein to make some suggestions that may lead to practical results. There should be a national organization, operating through branches in the various states, whose business it should be to secure information and proceed against officials who mistreat those who come into their power. It should be wide of scope, covering in its espionage and influence, penitentiaries, workhouses, houses of correction and detention, jails and insane asylums. It should suggest and carry forward legislation when and where needed. It is indefensible to abuse the human body in the so-called interests of justice. Justice is idealized in a woman and our old ancestors in selecting a blind goddess, instead of a blind god to represent justice, in theory at least, favored government in mercy. Those in all time who have wronged God and man, as a rule, were the mighty and powerful. Dickens wrote down the abuses of almshouses and imprisonment for debt. Other able pens in other times and countries have attacked the orgies of the prison keeper. I have spent 12 years of my life prosecuting and passing judgment on humans charged with violations of the law. I oppose inflicting corporal punishment on those committed to prisons. I oppose leasing out prisoners to private contractors to work in mines, brickyards, plantations, turpentine camps, etc., as practiced principally in Southern States. An organization such as I suggest could secure such information as would appall the country and force a correction of present conditions. A book is in existence containing the voluntary confession of an ex-superintendent of the Florida Penitentiary, the details of which will harrow up the soul of a Christian. The condition in Arkansas, where prisoners are worked in a brickyard, in other Southern States where they are worked on plantations; how friendless and harmless persons passing through certain sections of these states are convicted as vagrants and sent to plantations, for the sordid purpose of working the life out of them for private gain are easily ascertained facts. The conviction some year or two ago in the Federal courts of the Smiths in Southeast Missouri for peonage; the disclosures made by George P. Chinn, former Warden of the Kentucky Penitentiary, a brave and humane man, whose report to the Governor contains a confession of one George D. Woodruff, a guard. Woodruff therein says he whipped on an average five men a day for one and one-half years and that he was compelled to "lay on the lash until blood flowed from the shoulders to the heels." From information within my reach I could go on indefinitely with data. Suffice it to say that a grown American, good or bad, once whipped, has much excuse to become a social demon. Now to the point. Gov. Charles P. Johnson started this move in your paper and if you can induce him to keep it up, I will give him and it one or two years of my life and energy without fee or price. Ask those of your readers who will aid to send their names to you and with a limited number an organization can be formed that will spread and command respect far and wide, and result in eradicating, if not all, the greater part of these savage ev

THE LAST LAUGH.

WAYS IN ST. LOUIS.

Letter in the Chicago News.

Like the "Former St. Louisan," I, too, know something of St. Louis, as I was born and raised there, but I have come to live in Chicago because I find the business opportunities better here, the climate more desirable, living expenses (especially rent) lower here, the people more sociable and in fact find everything that makes life worth living better here than in St. Louis.

As far as the policemen's drinking is concerned, one can see just as much of it in St. Louis as here, but as most of the saloons in St. Louis are in the rear rooms of groceries, perhaps a "Former St. Louisan" does not call them "bars."

He is undoubtedly wrong about there being electric lights at each street corner in St. Louis and at the alley entrances. St. Louis formerly did have these, but a few years ago went back again to lighting the residence streets with gas.

Some years ago when we in Chicago were patiently riding in old broken-down street cars and dreaming of having better ones some day, St. Louis had a fine car system, but now that Chicago has new and up-to-date street cars the St. Louis street cars will have to take a back seat. Then there are no parts of St. Louis served by such rapid transit as our elevated roads afford.

If "Former St. Louisan" will now go back to St. Louis for a visit he will find that the mounted police make no better showing than do our own and that the metal-box garbage wagons are no better than if as good as the modern metal box garbage wagons now in use here.

There is one thing that "Former St. Louisan" mentions that I would like to see adopted here, and that is the special tax levied against all property to provide for sprinkling the streets. St. Louis streets are kept sprinkled the year around for a cost that does not exceed 10 cents to 15 cents a year for a lot of 20 feet front. And the dust is laid on all improved streets whether they have residences on them or are only vacant property. This is one improvement that would help to make Chicago the 'city beautiful."

BUENA PARK.
Chicago.

THREE REASONS.

From the New York World.

Returning from France, Paul Morton suggests that we should tax travelers' letters of credit and require Americans, between their trips abroad, to travel an equal number of miles in this country.

Three of the very many reasons why such a policy would be asinine may suffice:

1. Every American traveling abroad is an effective drummer for American goods, whether he knows it or not, and trade follows his footsteps.

2. It does no American harm to get his national conceit lessened by observing how much more certain is the punishment of criminals of high finance in England, how much better are the roads in France and city administration in Germany, how much cheaper railroad travel is in Hungary and Italy, than with us.

3. A citizen of a free republic has the right to go where he pleases.

Considering that France buys twice as much of our goods as we do of hers, and that Mr. Morgan is baiting his hook for French investors, Mr. Morgan's boycott against France is a grim joke on his fellow financiers.

JUST A MINUTE.

Written for the Post-Dispatch by Clark McAdams.

AFRICAN NIGHTS.

BWANA TUMBO did $750 in 30 minutes on the typewriter. This was the African record, so he dropped the hood over the machine and joined the circle at the fire.

"Up in the Blackfoot Mountains of Wyoming," he said, "is Jim Bridger's Bear Trap, one of the first wonders of the West. It is a perfect pothole in the solid sandstone—30 feet deep—small at the mouth—and as ingenious a trap as nature ever set for her kind. Even now there probably is not a week when it does not catch a bear or a mountain lion, and in early times it was good for a zoo every night. The Blackfeet Indians dropped their enemies into it, to be devoured by the beasts. When I was there in the 'eighties the bottom of the pot was covered by eight feet of debris, chiefly bones.

"The first white man into that country was Jim Bridger, of whom it has been said that he began blazing the west trail where Daniel Boone left off. He was one of those terrible men of whom Kipling would say that he lived more stories than we could invent. Bridger struck the Blackfoot country about 1820. The Indians immediately captured him and dropped him into the Trap. He was not even given a knife. There were two black bears and three mountain lions in there, but they had been fighting, and when Bridger joined them they were so far gone that he stoned them to death. Three hours after he was consigned to the place, darkness set it. Every once in a while Bridger would hear a scratch-scratch on the lip of the pot—a whine of fright—and the soft thud of a newcomer. By 10 o'clock the place was fairly lit up with eyes. However, as far as Jim could make out, nothing had entered that promised immediate death. Wildcats and wolves seemed to be about the worst he had with him. None of them attacked him, and he was chuckling over the squshy impact of a badger that had just fallen in front of him when he heard a sniffing that caused him to look up at the rim. As he did so, his heart stopped. A grizzley! Old Ephraim peered into the pit a bit, and began shambling along the lip. Jim had observed that exactly opposite him was a particularly slick place which had contributed most of his associates. When the grizzley stepped upon this his front feet flew from under him, he uttered a hoarse and horrible scream—and fell in backward!

"Jim knew it was all up with him if that bear ever got on its feet. Wild with rage, it would kill him like a bug. It takes quick wit to act in an emergency like that, but Jim was equal to the occasion. The bear hitting the bottom, Jim hitting the bear, and the bear hitting Jim back with one of its spring-action hind feet were like three blows of a trip hammer. Jim caught that blow flat on the chest. He rose like a rocket, turned over once—and fell in a bush on the edge of the hole! His breast-bone was smashed, and he was spitting blood, but he had strength enough to hold on and thank God while the grizzley was scouring out that terrible pit."

A cocoanut quitted the fronded palms and struck with a whack just back of the tent.

"What was that?" Bwana Tumbo exclaimed, reaching for his rifle.

Cunninghame rose on his elbow and peered over his shoulder.

"I thing Ananias has been thrown in with us," he said.

AUGURIES.

Saw a feller yestaday
With a cane pole on his back
En a tin box in his hand
Hikin' down the railroad track.

En see 'f the sun kin knock me off.
Never felt the wear en tear
O' summer like I do today—
Made the office awful ...
En ain' done nothin' since I ...

SMALL EXPECTATIONS.

Popular expectation of the Taft administration is by this time comparable to what Christina thinks could have happened to the baker's daughter in Bell's new story of the Scotch.

"What do you suppose Miss Brown was telling me?" said Christina's aunt.

Christina looked blank. "What?" she inquired.

"O, you must try to guess," said Miss Purvis, all smiles. "It's a great event."

"O, I ken," the girl replied. "A cookie burst an' killed twa currants."

BEDELL.—Whitewash mixed with four or five ounces of sulphate of zinc to a pailful is said to be a good sticker.

L. K.—"Fifteen or 20 years ago," the Last Days of Pompeii display was on ground running from Suburban tracks over to what is now Kensington Garden.

SECRETLY MARRIED.—A married woman may carry on business in her maiden name, so long as there is nothing fraudulent in such use of the name. She could not transfer real estate.

A. G.—Turpentine is used to make paint thinner. Turpentine in outside paint makes it less liable to blister. Paint in which there is turpentine dries sooner than that mixed wholy with oil.

BALL.—Property in name of husband and wife: If foreclosed, wife having signed deed of trust, she has no claim thereto. If sold otherwise, or in the event of divorce, she is entitled to half the proceeds.

PERPLEXED.—Unless there is a contract to the contrary, in writing, tenant makes repairs. Have your member of the Legislature draw up and introduce a bill making rents not collectible when necessary repairs are not made.

LINZ.—Registration for Government land drawing: For Flathead, Kalispell or Missoula, Mont.; Coeur d'Alene, Coeur d'Alene; Spokane, Spokane. Mail application to James W. Witten, Coeur d'Alene, Idaho. Registration closes Aug. 5.

G.—Sour cucumber pickles: Soak small cucumbers in brine (strong enough to hold up an egg) for 72 hours. Then soak 20 hours in clear water, making three changes. Put in crock and cover with boiling vinegar. In 10 days drain off vinegar, boil and again pour over pickles.

L. F. G.—When slate is left in a shed by a slovenly tenant, the law doesn't say whether new tenant or landlord shold remove it. You should have examined the premises before renting, and required a written agreement from the landlord to clear away the slate.

CITY GIRL.—For basement sand fleas: Soak wood sawdust in kerosene; strew about freely by hand. If the fleas have invaded the upper structure, follow the same procedure, with less oil on the sawdust, and allow it to remain on the floor for a few hours before sweeping.

J. W. B.—The Illinois tax title may and may not be a good title regardless whether the purchaser had peaceable possession since 1900. Get an abstract thereto and have an attorney pass on same before purchasing. Unless all requirements of law were strictly complied with the title may be worthless.

READER.—Will is probated at place where deceased established his residence; merely residing in St. Louis temporarily, at which place his will was drawn, would not necessarily compel its probate in St. Louis. The same should be drawn according to laws of State where real estate is situated, and as to personal property according to laws of the State of his domicile.

W.—For sunflowers, 10 to 15 pounds of seed per acre. Plant in rows 12 to 16 inches apart. The heads are harvested shortly before they are thoroughly ripe, to prevent loss of seed. Before storing they are carefully dried to prevent molding. The seeds are threshed out with flails. (The common sunflower is a native of the tropics, where it sometimes attains a height of 20 feet and produces flower heads from 1 to 2 feet in diameter.)

SUBSCRIBER.—"Suppose a Catholic marries a non-Catholic. The non-Catholic being a divorced person, they tell the priest neither has been married before. Should the priest find out that the non-Catholic has been divorced, what steps would the priest take? Would they be permitted to live together? Would the Catholic doctrine compel the Catholic to denounce and separate from the non-Catholic?" To this question a high Catholic authority says: "The marriage performed by the priest is in possession, and before an order of separation and declaration of annulment is issued it must be shown that the marriage from which the non-Catholic was divorced was a valid one, and that the partner is still living."

MISS BLANK.—A rich cooked ice cream is made with a pint of milk, the yolks of six eggs, and half a pound of granulated sugar. Cook in a double boiler to a smooth, velvety custard, being careful it does not boil. Let get cold, flavor with lemon or vanilla, and add a pint of good sweet cream. While cooling it must be constantly stirred. Freeze as usual. When nearly hard, one quart of crushed strawberries, or one quart of rich-flavored peaches mashed smooth, may be stirred well into the cream, then freeze until hard. A delicious banana ice cream is made thus: Put one cupful of sugar into one pint of milk and let it come to a scald, remove from the fire and stir until the sugar is dissolved. Set aside until cool. While it is cooling whip a pint of sweet cream to a stiff froth and peel and mash to a pulp six fine ripe bananas. Mix these with the stiffly whipped white of an egg into the cold sweetened milk, and freeze as usual. For lemon ice cream bring one pint each of milk and cream to a scald with one-fourth of a pound of sugar. Grate off the yellow rinds of three lemons, squeeze out the juice, also the juice of an orange, and mix together the rinds, juice, and half a pound of sugar. Stir this mixture into the scalded milk and cream, set aside until cold and freeze. The best ice cream is almost without exception based on a quart of pure cream—no milk—mixed with the other ingredients, to make two quarts when frozen. All cream and no milk gives it that delicious softness for which certain creams are famous and which neither cornstarch nor gelatine can successfully imitate.

THE WIDOW SAYS:

Every Woman Plays Many Parts in Being Man's "Ideal."

Written for the Post-Dispatch

BY HELEN ROWLAND

"NOT another step!" cried the Widow, flinging down her brassy and sinking on the grass in a pink ruffled heap as she missed the seventh hole for the fourteenth time, "I can't go another step."

"Of course you can't," sighed the Bachelor, disgustedly. "Why will a woman like you attempt to play golf in heels that rival the Wells Building and a skirt like an attenuated lampshade?"

"Because men—like you—expect her to," retorted the Widow promptly.

"Like ME?" repeated the Bachelor, indignantly. "I'm a sensible being, I hope."

The Widow nodded cheerfully.

"That's why you like a nonsensical fluffety-ruffety being, like ME," she announced, chewing a grass blade with apparent relish. "It's all a part of having to be a man's 'ideal' every minute," he continued. 'Each woman in her time, plays many 'parts,' because every man picks out a different role for her. One man no sooner has her remodeled, improved and made over to fit his imaginary ideal, than another man comes along and lops off the improvements and puts on new additions. She is like a house that is always changing owners."

"Or an actress that is always changing her leading man."

"Yes," acquiesced the Widow, sadly, "I've been everything from a Cleopatra to a Priscilla already. Every man has a different standard of manners and a different code of morals for a woman; and just as you think you are perfectly fascinating and angelic according to one man's code, another man comes along with a different code and wants to 'reform' you. The first proof of a man's love is his desire to 'reform' a woman—whatever that is. I've been 'reformed' so many times that I know 43 ways of getting into heaven."

"Whe-ew!" exclaimed the Bachelor. "For instance?"

"For instance," explained the Widow, "my first 'leading man' believed that 'woman's sphere was as Queen of the Home,' but by the time I had acquired dotted swiss aprons and learned to do "raffia work in public and to manipulate a chafing dish, I—I had another leading man."

"Oh!" The Bachelor winced.

"HE opined that a woman should be independent and athletic and sporty and have a life work. But by the time he had taught me to smoke cigarettes"—

"What?"

"And to hold cigarettes without burning my fingers or choking to death, I had met—somebody else, who disapproved of everything from a powdered nose to ice cream sodas. And, by the time I had learned to sit through a sermon and had stopped curling my hair, and telling white fibs and had become strong-minded, another man came along and convinced me that it was better to be weak-minded and pretty than strong-minded and plain; and by the time"—

"Great Scott!" broke in the Bachelor, "WHAT time was THAT?"

"The time—before I met you," returned the Widow, sweetly. "It's a hard life," she added, "being a variegated 'ideal.'"

"Why don't you try being yourself for a while?" inquired the Bachelor, sarcastically.

"I haven't any self," moaned the Widow. 'No popular woman has an self after 22. She is just a stock actress, ready and waiting to play any role from Circe to Little Eva, according to the requireemnts of her next—engagement."

"Then," suggested the Bachelor, with sudden inspiration, 'why don't you settle down to one leading man—say ME, for instance—with a steady job at the role of WIFE, and a regular salary and no change of bill and"—

"And only two changes of costume and no changes of dialogue or scenery, and no excitement—Ugh!" shuddered the Widow. "It's time enough for a girl to begin playing old women's parts when she HAS to. Besides," she added, glancing up sidewise, "I'd rather be your ideal"—

"What?"

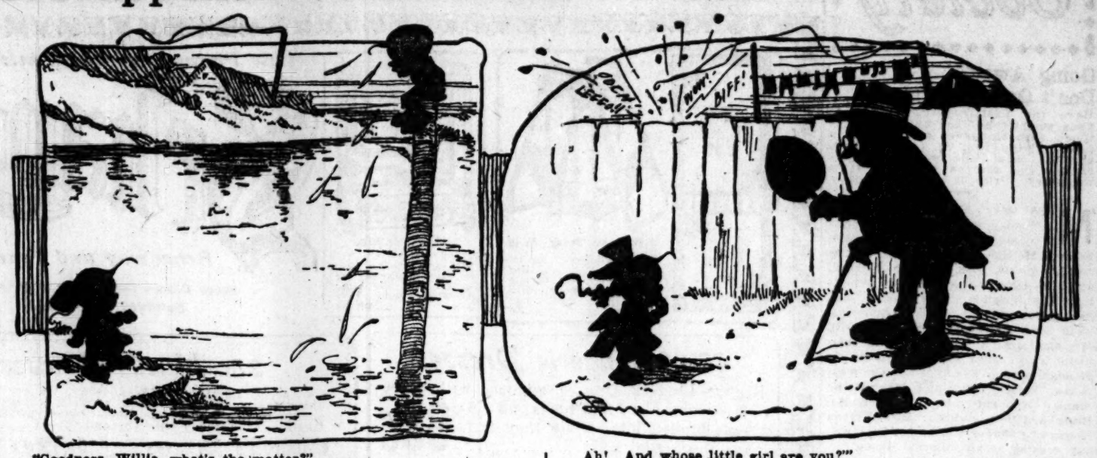

"Than your wife."

"Be BOTH!" persisted the Bachelor. 'Can't a woman be a man's ideal and a man's wife at the same time?"

"Oh, yes," murmured the Widow, softly, "but not the SAME man's."

The Circular Staircase

By Mary Roberts Rinehart

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Miss Rachel Innes tells the story. She and her nephew, Halsey, and niece, Gertrude, take Paul Armstrong's country place, Sunnyside, for the summer, while the Armstrongs are out West. John Bailey, who is engaged to Gertrude, comes to see them. The night of his arrival Arnold Armstrong is found killed in the cardroom at the foot of the circular staircase. Halsey and Bailey disappear, but Halsey comes back. There are many mysterious happenings in the house which Miss Innes and Detective Jamieson cannot explain, though they are sure Halsey and Gertrude could aid them if they would. In the midst of the trouble the Armstrong bank (the Traders') fails. Bailey was an employe of the bank and much of the Innes money was there. His continued absence gives ground for the suspicion that he robbed the bank and that he killed Arnold Armstrong. Paul Armstrong (Arnold's and Louise's father) is reported to have died out West and a body is brought back for burial. Later the grave is opened and the body found there is not that of Paul Armstrong. Louise Armstrong, to whom Halsey has been paying attention, is found ill in the lodge concealed there by old servants. She recovers and becomes Miss Innes' guest, until her mother comes for her. Halsey goes to see her in the village. Subsequently his automobile is found smashed up, but he cannot be found. Anne Warner is the housekeeper at Sunnyside. She seems to be mixed in the mysterious doings. There is a child in the village called Lucien Walker, of whom no one, not even his caretaker, knows anything. The stables at Sunnyside are burned and during the excitement a stranger is shot. Dr. Walker tries to block Miss Innes' investigations. He is attending Louise Armstrong. A warning is received to look out for Nina Carrington, who Miss Innes does not know. Riggs, a former employe of Dr. Walker, confesses to have had some part in the mystery and identifies a small pox pitted woman, who was temporarily employed at Sunnyside as Nina Carrington. She is killed by a train. A tramp brings information of finding a man gagged in a box car going out West. The tramp has Halsey's watch and confesses he stole it from the gagged man. A tramp brings the information that Halsey is in a hospital at Johnstown. Detective Jamieson believes there is a secret room at Sunnyside and someone is searching for it.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Between Two Fireplaces.

WHAT with the excitement of the discovery, the walk home under the stars in wet shoes and draggled skirts, and getting upstairs and undressed without rousing Liddy, I was completely used up. What to do with my boots was the greatest puzzle of all, there being no place in the house safe from Liddy, until I decided to slip upstairs the next morning and drop them into the hole the "ghost" had made in the trunk room wall.

I went asleep as soon as I reached this decision, and in my dreams I lived over again the events of the night. Again I saw the group around the silent figure on the grass, and again, as had happened at the grave, I heard Alex's voice, tense and triumphant:

"Then we've got them," he said. Only, in my dreams, he said it over and over until he seemed to shriek it in my ears.

I wakened early, in spite of my fatigue, and lay there thinking. Who was Alex? I no longer believed that he was a gardener. Who was the man whose body we had resurrected? And where was Paul Armstrong? Probably living safely in some extradictionless country on the fortune he had stolen. Did Louise and her mother know of the shameful and wicked deception? What had Thomas known, and Mrs. Watson? Who was Nina Carrington?

This last question, it seemed to me, was answered. In some way the woman had learned of the substitution, and had tried to use her knowledge for blackmail. Nina Carrington's own story died with her, but, however it happened, it was clear that she had carried her knowledge to Halsey the afternoon Gertrude and I were looking for clews to the man I had shot on the east veranda. Halsey had been half crazed by what he heard; it was evident that Louise was marrying Dr. Walker to keep the shameful secret, for her mother's sake. Halsey, always reckless, had gone at once to Dr. Walker and denounced him. There had been a scene, and he left on his way to the station to meet and notify Mr. Jamieson of what he had learned. The doctor was active mentally and physically. Accompanied perhaps by Riggs, who had shown himself not overscrupulous until he quarreled with his employer, he had gone across to the railroad embankment, and, by jumping in front of the car, had caused Halsey to swerve. The rest of the story we knew.

That was my reconstructed theory of that afternoon and evening: it was almost correct—not quite.

There was a telegram that morning from Gertrude.

Halsey conscious and improving. Probably home in day or so. GERTRUDE.

With Halsey found and improving in health, and with at last something to work on, I began that day, Thursday, with fresh courage. As Mr. Jamieson had said, the lines were closing up. That I was to be caught and almost finished in the closing was happily unknown to us all.

It was late when I got up. I lay in my bed, looking around the four walls of the room, and trying to imagine behind what one of them a secret chamber might lie. Certainly in daylight, Sunnyside deserved its name: never was a house more cheery and open, less sinister in general appearance. There was not a corner apparently that was not open and above board, and yet, somewhere behind its handsomely papered walls I believed firmly that there lay a hidden room, with all the possibilities it would involve.

I made a mental note to have the house measured during the day, to discover any discrepancy between the outer and inner walls, and I tried to recall again the exact wording of the paper Jamieson had found.

The slip had said "chimney." It was the only clew, and a house as large as Sunnyside was full of them. There was an open fireplace in my dressing room, but none in the bedroom, and as I lay there, looking around, I thought of something that made me sit up suddenly. The trunk room, just over my head, had an open fireplace and a brick chimney, and yet, there was nothing of the kind in my room. I got out of bed and examined the opposite wall closely. There was apparently no flue, and I knew there was none in the hall just beneath. The house was heated by steam, as I have said before. In the living room was a huge open fireplace, but it was on the other side.

Why did the trunk room have both a radiator and an open fireplace? Architects were not usually erratic. It was not 15 minutes before I was up stairs, armed with a tape measure in lieu of a foot rule, eager to justify Mr. Jamieson's opinion of my intelligence, and firmly resolved not to tell him of my suspicion until I had more than theory to go on. The hole in the trunk room wall still yawned there, between the chimney and the outer wall. I examined it again, with no new result. The space between the brick wall and the plaster and lath one, however, had a new significance. The hole showed only one side of the chimney, and I determined to investigate what lay in the space on the other side of the mantel.

I worked feverishly. Liddy had gone to the village to market, it being her firm belief that the store people sent short measure unless she watched the scales, and that, since the failure of the Traders' Bank, we must watch the corners; and I knew that what I wanted to do must be done before she came back. I had no tools, but after rummaging around I found a pair of garden scissors and a hatchet, and thus armed, I set to work. The plaster came out easily; the lathing was more obstinate. It gave under the blows, only to spring back into place again, and the necessity for caution made it doubly hard.

I had a blister on my palm when at last the hatchet went through and fell with what sounded like the report of a gun to my overstrained nerves. I sat on a trunk, waiting to hear Liddy fly up the stairs, with the household behind her, like the tail of a comet. But nothing happened, and with a growing feeling of uncanniness I set to work enlarging the opening.

The result was absolutely nil. When I could hold a lighted candle in the opening, I saw precisely what I had seen on the other side of the chimney—empty space between the true wall and the false one, possibly seven feet long and about three feet wide. It was in no sense of the word a secret chamber, and it was evident it had not been disturbed since the house was built. It was a supreme disappointment.

It had been Mr. Jamieson's idea that the hidden room, if there was one, would be found somewhere near the circular staircase. In fact, I knew that he had once investigated the entire length of the clothes chute, hanging to a rope, with this in view. I was reluctantly about to concede that he had been right, when my eyes fell on the mantel and fireplace. The latter had evidently never been used: it was closed with a metal fire front, and only when the front refused to move, and investigation showed that it was not intended to be moved, did my spirits revive.

I hurried into the next room. Yes, sure enough, there was a similar mantel and fireplace there, similarly closed. In both rooms the chimney flue extended well out from the wall. I measured with the tape line, my hands trembling so that I could scarcely hold it. They extended two feet and a half into each room, which with the three feet of space between the two partitions, made eight feet to be accounted for. Eight feet in one direction and almost seven in the other—what a chimney it was!

But I had only located the hidden room. I was not in it, and no amount of pressing on the carving of the wooden mantels, no search of the floors for loose boards, none of the customary methods availed at all. That there was a means of entrance, and probably a simple one, I could be certain. But what? What would I find if I did get in? Was the detective right, and were the bonds and money from the Traders' Bank there? Or was our whole theory wrong? Would not Paul Armstrong have taken his booty with him? If he had not, and if Dr. Walker was in the secret, he would have known how to enter the chimney room. Then—who had dug the other hole in the false partition?

WOMEN WHO WORK

Care for Health Insures Prosperity and Happiness

Written for the Post-Dispatch

By REV. MADISON C. PETERS

THERE is a difference between health and physical strength. A girl may be perfectly healthy, but at the same time may not be able to dig a ditch; for perfect development of muscle is by no means a resultant of perfect health.

Health is the result of living in strict accordance with the laws of nature; muscle is acquired by physical training. Weston, the famous long-distance walker, has broomstick limbs. He says: "Muscles are only traps in which to catch rheumatism."

It is a mistake to think that you are so healthy as to have no necessity for observing the rules of health. You will discover this mistake usually when it is too late.

The body is a very complicated piece of mechanism, and when it gets out of order is hard to repair. A new mainspring or a balance wheel may set your watch right again, but it is different with your body—the parts are so intricate and so many that it may be very hard to locate the cause of the trouble, and when located to remedy it.

If the weak sections are neglected, they will surely snap beyond repair. But if the whole machine be well oiled and kept well oiled with fresh air, plenty of exercise and plain food, every section can be so strengthened as to resist tthe wear and tear put upon it, and perform its proper functions in the complete mechanism of the body. This accounts for seemingly sick women outliving the apparently robust. The wasting of your strength when young will make weak points discover themselves before middle age. Benjamin Franklin said:

"If you will not hear Reason, she will rap your knuckles."

Nature demands fresh air. Many people keep the windows shut and the shades drawn, excluding the life-giving air and sunlight, preserving the color in their carpets, but losing it in their cheeks. An Italian proverb runs: "Where the sun does not come in, the doctor does."

The factory and the mill, the store and the office are often under-ventilated, while some schools are veritable germ-incubators and nurseries of tuberculosis, phthisis and other pulmonary and bronchial diseases. The windows are for the most part closed and the steam radiators send out a dead, bacilli-breeding heat which contaminates the air with a sickly heaviness, causing headache, nervousness and other annoying effects which often lead to serious consequences.

Many people absent themselves from church on Sundays because of the utter lack of proper ventilation in some of the buildings, and bad air sends more to sleep under the sermons than poor preaching.

If you are compelled to work where the temperature is high and the air heavy, safeguard yourself against sudden change by providing yourself with proper clothing. It may be possible to inure yourself to all kinds of temperature and all kinds of weather, but the body will suffer and you will become old before your time, just as people look much older than they really are who have traveled much in different countries.

Our climate is variable and uncertain, yet you will see women openly defying all kinds of weather and breaking all rules of hygiene on stormy days, when the winds are howling and the rains hissing, going about with low shoes with the thinnest soles, and with wraps around their shoulders suitable only to a mild spring morning.

This is the genteel way of committing suicide, for although their foolhardiness may not have an immediate effect, it will nevertheless lay the germs, the deadly ravages of which will cut them down at a time of life when they should be just beginning to live.

Connect yourself with a gymnasium where you will have the benefit of instructors who understand just how much exercise you require and of what you are capable. Get a private instructor if you can afford it, but if you can't, join a club where for 25 or 50 cents a week you can have the services of competent directors, and the money will be much better spent than on candy or in matinees.

In some European countries the working girl's breakfast consists of a slice of hard bread and a pennyworth of onions, because she can get no better. But in the end she is as well off, for the bread and onions are wholesome and nourishing. The danger to the American girl lies in the variety.

Good sense is the greatest preservative of health. Never before have women had such a chance in the world as today and in this country. But the chance will avail them nothing unless they have the health to seize it and the vigor to hold it.

Do nothing that you know will hurt you, and when you do what is beneficial do it in moderation. Euripides declared: "Moderation is the noblest gift of heaven."

Heard Something.

ONE summer evening a miller was leaning over his garden gate, facing the road, enjoying his pipe, when a conceited young farmer happened to be passing. The miller, in a friendly tone, said:

"Good evening," George."

"I didn't speak," said George, gruffly.

"Oh," said the miller. "I thought you did; but it must have been your ears flapping."—Chattanooga Times.

LITTLE GUIDES TO BEAUTY

Advice for Inquirers From the Post-Dispatch Expert.

By MARGARET HUBBARD AYER.

Eyebrow and Eyelash Grower.

G.—Here is the formula for the liquid eyelash grower: Cologne, 2½ ounces; glycerine, 1½ ounces; fluid extract of jaborandi, 2 drams. Agitate the ingredients till thoroughly incorporated. Apply to the eyebrows with a brush and to the lashes with a tiny camel's hair paint brush. The brush must be freed from any drop and passed lightly along the edge of the eyelids, exercising extreme care that no minutest portion of the lotion touches the eye itself.

Oily, Damp Hair.

REBECCA A.—Here is the formula requested. Do not apply it too often to the hair, and when the oily condition is relieved, do not use it at all, as it is very drying in its effects and if applied too frequently will make the hair brittle. For greasy, moist hair the following is an excellent drying lotion. If used daily it tends to produce a crisp condition and an auburn shade. Powdered bicarbonate of soda, borate of soda (also powdered, ¼ ounce of each; eau de cologne, 1 fluid ounce; alcohol, 2 fluid ounces; tincture of cochineal, ¼ fluid ounce; distilled water, 16 ounces. Mix and agitate until solution is complete.

Complexion Troubles.

JERRY.—It is no disgrace for a boy to have freckles, and it would certainly seem very strange for a boy to use a face bleach. As soon as you went into the sun again, after bleaching out the freckles, they would come back, and as you couldn't go around with face power on and a veil, it would be useless to bleach your skin. At any rate, it would not be well to work on the freckles until you had overcome the excessive oiliness and enlarged pores, for it is much more important to have a healthy skin than a white one. The face scrubbing brush will be good for both troubles and the oily condition may be overcome by changing your diet and avoiding rich, greasy foods, things that are fried, pastries, etc.

Her Moods.

A WOMAN is a thing, they say,
Of moods. To be explicative—
She points out to a man the way
To go—and that's Indicative.

At first she does it gently, just
To save a scene compunctive—
Says that he "may," not that he "must,"
And that's her mood Subjunctive.

If he demurs, does she give way?
Nay, never for a minute! I've Known her to work for many a day
To win. And that's Infinitive.

But if suggestion, patience, tact,
Fail, she becomes declarative.
She orders—and you'd better act
Good, when her mood's Imperative!

"How I Stained My Hair Brown"

Society Woman Wants to Tell Readers How She Stained Her Faded Hair Without Using Hair Dye.

"I think the readers of your paper ought to get the benefit of my experience," said a well-known society woman in an interview. "It is in regard to staining hair. I am now going on to forty years of age and some months ago my hair was nearly all gray, faded, and falling out, and I used to bleach my hair besides. I tried various hair-dyes but I found, as nearly every other woman has found, that by using these dyes you can't conceal the fact that you have dyed your hair. And besides, my hair began to fall out worse than before because of the poisons in the hair-dyes. And then I had to use the dye almost every week or ten days so as to turn the color of the hair near the roots.

"Finally I decided to try walnut-tint hair-stain. Well, you see what a beautiful rich brown my hair has now, and you'd never think I stained my hair at all. It has grown out remarkably fluffy since I have used it. I apply it with a comb in a few minutes only once a month. It stains nothing but the hair, never harms it in the least, and makes it grow out luxuriantly. It stains the hair evenly from tip to root, so that experts cannot tell that you have stained your hair.

Mrs. Potter's Walnut-Tint Hair Stain is what I used. She is the only one who manufactures it. If you want to try it first you write her for a sample package of her Walnut-Tint Hair Stain and enclose twenty-five cents in stamps or coin to help pay postage and packing, and you will get it by return mail in plain, sealed wrapper. Address her, Mrs. Potter's Hygienic Supply Co., 436 Groton Building, Cincinnati, Ohio. She will also send you free her very interesting book on hair."

Mrs. Potter's Walnut-Tint Hair Stain has the advantage over hair-dyes of containing no copper, sulphur, lead or other poisons which cause hair-falling, and has no oil, no sediment and no grease. It is for gray, faded or bleached hair. Any shade can be obtained from a beautiful rich brown to almost black. It does not rub off on the clothing. One bottle should ordinarily last a year.

It is sold at drug stores generally at one dollar a package. Send for the 25-cent trial package today.

Mrs. Potter's Walnut-Tint Hair Stain is recommended and for sale in St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., 6th and Washington av.; Raloteau & Co., Broadway and Washington av. and Broadway and Lucas av., and Johnson Bros., Broadway and Franklin av.

A Wedding Hint.

THE tall girl smiled in some embarrassment.

"Haven't you got any second-hand shoes?" she said to the shoe clerk.

"But, miss—" he remonstrated.

"No, no, you misunderstand," said she. "I don't mean to wear. I just mean old shoes, too worn for use, that customers have left with you. You see, there's a wedding up at our house tomorrow, and we want something to throw at the bride and bridegroom."

"I see," said the clerk.

He rummaged in a black hole and drew forth an armful of dilapidated footwear. The girl selected some 3s, 2s and 1s.

"These will do. Thanks ever so much," she said, and departed.

"Big-footed people are always working that on us," said the clerk afterward. "That girl wears 3s. She couldn't very well throw such mud-scows at the bride, so she chose some little and dainty shoes here—1s and 2s. Oh, yes, it's an old trick with the big-footed."—Los Angeles Times.

ANOTHER ROOSEVELT POLICY FALLS; TENNIS COURT IS GONE

Playground of Former President Is Ruthlessly Plowed Up.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—The famous Roosevelt tennis court, where once Secretary Jimmy Garfield, Ambassador Jusserand, Gifford Pinchot and the lesser lights of the tennis cabinet cavorted at tennis to the delight of their exalted leader, is on the Fritz.

A large colored person with a plow and a team of flea-bitten gray horses attacked the tennis court yesterday When he got through the carefully packed clay court was wrinkled and furrowed as the brow of a stand-pat Congressman who hails from an insurgent Kansas district.

The tennis court must make way for the new forty-thousand-dollar addition to the Executive offices of the President. Mr. Taft had no use for a tennis court—it wasn't big enough for golf links—so the contractors got busy.

The Franklin Clothing Co.'s $120,000.00 stock of clothing and furnishings for men and boys will be placed on Retail Public Sale at the southwest corner building (Wolff Bldg.) of Franklin av. and 7th sts.

FORCED TO QUIT BUSINESS! LEASE EXPIRES! MUST VACATE!

Time is limited, and it is not our concern any longer of how much the stock will bring, it is a question of how quickly it can be sold. The task before us, means the utter disposal of our Mammoth Gents' Furnishings and Clothing stock within sixteen short days, and we realize that there is but one alternative to accomplish this.

Let the Goods Go for What They Will Bring

And so we have placed this avalanche of high-grade merchandise for Men's and Boys' wear on Public Sale.

Sale Takes Place at Southwest Corner of Franklin Av. and 7th St.

Barring nothing, reserving nothing. The bulk of these tailor-made garments consists of this season's best and nobbiest styles, complete lines of highest class suits, pants, coats, hats and furnishings of every description, they all must go in these sixteen days.

Wednesday, August 4th to August 21

The stock is marked at following and proportionate drastic reductions, which no matter how strong they may seem, are absolutely true and not exaggerated in the minimum, backed by the broadest guarantee.

SATISFACTION OR MONEY REFUNDED

But bear in mind the following items are quoted on merely a very small portion of the stock. For further prices and full particulars of the sale, see our special 4-page edition.

SOLID GOLD & SILVER AWARD

For the Best Ear of Corn

To be Known as the W. K. Kellogg National Corn Trophy

To be Awarded at the National Corn Exposition, Omaha, December 6 to 18, 1909.

Over one hundred thousand million (100,000,000,000) ears of corn were grown in the United States last year. Over a billion dollars were paid for them. More than a million and a quarter extra dollars went into the pockets of the farmers for corn this year than they received for the previous year's crop.

The reason for this may be found in the fact that the people of the United States are beginning to learn how delicious corn is and to realize its full food value.

Kellogg's Toasted Corn Flakes has placed corn among the indispensable items of daily fare.

The makers, therefore, are interested in the development of the King of Cereals, and have decided to award a beautiful trophy for the man, woman or child who can produce the best ear of corn in two different seasons.

Professor Holden, of the Iowa State College, the greatest authority on corn in the world, will award the prize at the National Corn Exposition, to be held at Omaha, Neb., December 6th to 18th, 1909. Two single rules will govern the plan, and they are—that you send your best ear of corn to the National Corn Exposition, Omaha, Neb., before November 27, 1909; and that you are a member of the National Corn Association. Full particulars regarding which can be had by writing to National Corn Exposition, Omaha, Neb. Tie a tag securely to your specimen and word it, "For the Kellogg Trophy Contest," and write your name and address plainly. If yours is judged the best, you will get the trophy for 1910. If you succeed again next year or the year following, the trophy will become your property for all time. In other words, you must produce the best ear of corn two different years.

There will be no restrictions. Any man, woman or child belonging to the Association can enter. It will be open to every state in the Union. Professor Holden will judge the corn particularly on the basis of quality. The growing of more corn per acre is one object of the award, but the main purpose of the founder of the trophy is for

TWAIN HAS HEART DISEASE BUT HE STICKS TO TOBACCO

Humorist Compelled by Doctor to Cut His Forty Smokes a Day Down to Four, but His Moral Constitution Is Unimpaired.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—In a semi-jocose interview at his home near Redding, Conn., yesterday, Mark Twain let it become known that he is combating heart disease, brought about by his many years of excessive smoking. A reporter went to see if the veteran humorist had anything to say in reply to Dr. James L. Tracy's assertion in "American Medicine" that Twain was below par morally because he smoked a cigar at Oxford, England, while waiting the conferment of a degree over there. The white-flannel-clad Mark was sitting in an easy chair puffing at a pipe when the interviewer hailed him.

"This is the third of the four smokers that I'm allowed each 24 hours nowadays," he explained, without ever removing his pipe. "And I am obliged to sit right here for months and perhaps forever by the order of my doctor. He allows me only four smokes a day, where I have been all my life in the habit of taking at least forty.

"I cannot walk 300 yards or take an extra smoke or two but I pay the penalty with a severe pain in my heart. When I consider that I lived almost seventy-four years in as good health as any man and smoked 40 times a day without injury, as I thought, only to be cut down now to four smokes a day, I am in no position to dispute anything which Dr. Tracy, my critic, may say regarding smoking."

The humorist said he had not seen the article in question, nor even heard of it, until the reporter told him some of the things which Dr. Tracy had said about him. He seemed to be amused by some of Dr. Tracy's caustic comments upon the moral degeneracy of the smoker.

"But I don't mind what they say about me," he said. "I'm used to it, and through it all I've kept my moral character fairly clean.

Not Chief Criminal.

"Regarding the Oxford incident, the Doctor seems to have had a mistaken notion. I was not the chief criminal, and I was not even responsible for the occurrence.

"While we were awaiting our turn in the ceremonies, those of us who came up for letters and a few who were there for science degrees had to wait perhaps an hour.

"I inquired if smoking was allowed. Mr. Kipling said that it was forbidden by the rules. Then someone of the group of four said that we could go down in an out-of-the-way corridor and have a smoke. I think it was Sir Edward Ramsay who said that, but I would not accuse anyone wilfully. We went down there and had our smoke and no one said anything to us.

"No one came near us except a small army of photographers who got some pictures, so you see the crime was divided among four of us, one American and three Englishmen. If I can divide up all my crimes in the same proportion I shall be fortunate."

While he was talking the humorist relighted the pipe which he had been smoking and which had been burned out, thinking to get a few more puffs. It was an old pipe, evidently a favorite for the bowl was burned off one side and the stem was loose so that he had to push it in occasionally.

"Dr. Tracy is worried about my moral character, is he?" said the humorist, as he arose to indicate that the conference was at an end. "And he thinks the excessive use of tobacco is responsible for it? Well, tobacco is responsible for a good deal physically, but I don't think it can quite ruin a moral character."

CANNON READS BIBLE AND PLAYS POKER IN SUMMER

Speaker Considers Isaiah a Grand Character and Likes to Make the Blue Chips a Billion Dollars, the Reds a Half Billion.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—The summer meditations of Uncle Joe are peaceful and refreshingly cool. The perplexities of the Senate do not disturb him one bit.

"This is a good place to be," said the Speaker, as he sniffed at a slashing breeze whipping the greenery of the beautiful Capitol grounds and giving him a liberal portion through the windows of his big room on the east terrace.

"It is cool today. It may be hot other days, but it is cool now, and we should be content. It is true that I would rather be home. I have a little business to attend to, but that can wait. I would like to hear the crowing of the chickens in the very cool of the early morning. I mean the crowing of the roosters. Hens don't crow; they cluck. Also would like to hear the squealing and grunting of the pigs and the bellowing of the bulls, if they will only bellow. I really miss these things because I am used to them. But it is very pleasant here."

The Speaker took a few more sniffs of the wind. It was very fine and the troubles of the Senate were very far away. He continued: "I like driving through the country here. The roads are good and sleeping is pleasant at night. I find myself refreshed every morning, even though I do miss the barnyard concert."

"Do you play golf, Mr. Speaker?" inquired one of the inmates of his very comfortable room.

"No, I don't play golf. I think I regard that as better than no exercise. It is a game for middle-aged persons and I am too young to take it up. Perhaps I will some day.

"I like to read in the summer. I like to read good solid books about the acts of men who have done things. I like Gibbons' 'Rise and Fall of Rome.' Another book I like is 'Plutarch's Lives.' That's a great book.

"But after all the best literature in the least possible space is the Bible. I used to read it more than I do now, but I read it often. One can skip the long names and some of the hard parts, but the grandest parts of the Bible one never tires of reading. Some day I will tell you why I am specially fond of Matthew and John. What a great character was Isaiah, and in summer I like to play poker. Not for money, but to stimulate the imagination. For instance, I like to call the blue checks one billion dollars each, the reds about a half billion and the whites one hundred thousand dollars.

"In a good stiff game, with good fellows, you may win one thousand billion dollars. After you have won that much money, in your mind, is when you want to get the real enjoyment out of the game. You can smoke a cigar just before going to bed and think what you can buy with one thousand billion dollars. That's immense. You could give every man, woman and child something. You could buy the good things from all the bad people and give them all to the good people. And the more you dream while you are awake of giving away all that money you have won, the grander you will feel, and if you are careful you can go to bed without realizing it isn't true, and in the morning you will be so busy that you won't mind. That's what I call good summer recreation."

The childless rich will have an excellent opportunity during the dog days of August to help save the lives of the babies of the poor by contributing to the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund.

While he is enjoying his luxuries at the seaside or in his comfortable and cool West End home, in which there has never been heard the prattle of children, he might cast a thought to the poor babies in the squalor of the tenements.

It is around the doors of the tenement dwellers that the most children play. During these hot nights the mother with her babies is driven from the burning, poorly ventilated rooms to the roofs or the alleys. The conditions of life in the tenements are almost beyond belief.

And here, under these unfortunate circumstances, thousands of babies come into the world every year, and without the aid of the charitable people of the city 25 to 35 per cent—one out of every three or four—will die the first year. The poor tenement dwellers do not earn enough money—at least many of them do not—to properly provide for their children. The little ones must be helped, or they will die during the burning days and nights of August.

Pure Milk a Great Boon.

Surely the people of means of St. Louis are not going to allow the poor babies to suffer and die, when they can provide at least one great boon—pure milk. The milk that the poor are able to buy is wholly unfit for the babies.

It is sold from some corner grocery store or bake shop and at best is scarcely fit for human food. When it is given to babies as their only nourishment it is destructive to their lives.

The germ-laden milk easily sours in this hot weather, and yet it is all the children of the poor—in many instances—can get. It is no wonder that the babies, surrounded with so few other bodily comforts, sicken and die.

The lion's share of the work of saving the lives of the babies has been done, thus far, by the boys and girls of St. Louis, most of them under 14. The childless rich man, except in a few instances, has not shown much liberality. There is yet ample time for him to loosen his purse strings, and render substantial aid in saving the lives of the babies.

Many Could Spare Money.

There are thousands of people who are not rich, but who are in comfortable circumstances, who can spare some money to help save the lives of the tenement babies. They have surrounded themselves with comfort, their babies have pure milk and food and toys and everything to make their lives happy and comfortable.

Happy in the possession of a crowing, chubby baby, many parents seem to forget that there are aching hearts in the tenements because thousands of babies cannot be provided with even the meager and necessary comforts of life.

Hardest Season at Hand.

The hardest season of the year is now at hand. The boys and girls of St. Louis, industrious and active and generous as they have been, ought not to be expected to do all of this exceedingly important work. It is time to loosen the purse strings, and swell the life-saving fund.

Would it give you joy, Mr. Childless Man, or Mr. Well-to-do-Man, to know that you had been able to fan back the breath of life into some poor baby that is literally starving to death because its parents have not, from ignorance or poverty, been able to supply it with proper nourishment? Soldiers in this great cause are needed, and now is the time to enlist.

DISBARMENT PROCEEDINGS ARE DISMISSED IN F. A. WIND CASE

Referee Finds No Proof That Attorney Profited by Trust Fund of $27,074.

Disbarment proceedings filed by the Bar Association in 1906 against Attorney Frederick A. Wind have been dismissed by Judge Kinsey in the Circuit Court.

The proceedings grew out of a controversy between Wind and Mrs. Mabel Folk over a fund of $27,074 intrusted by Mrs. Folk with the attorney to manage for her. In a suit against the attorney she claimed there was a balance due of $3286.81, but Referee F. J. McMaster, who heard the case, cut down the amount of the claim. The Court of Appeals further reduced it to $325.

The referee found that there was no proof that Mr. Wind had made any profit out of the funds in his hand.

DREAMS SHE IS GETTING INTO BED; FALLS OUT OF WINDOW

Mrs. Louisa Miller, 66, Drops 20 Feet to Ground and Escapes With Bruises.

Mrs. Louisa Miller, 66 years old, was unable to explain with certainty how she fell out of a second-story window at her home in the rear of 1610 South Seventh street, 20 feet to the ground, at 2 a. m. Tuesday. She was bruised, but otherwise uninjured.

She said she was suffering from the heat, and that she got up out of bed and sat in a chair near the window. She went back to sleep immediately, she said, but the window sill was so high she was sure she could not have toppled out of the chair through the window.

"I must have dreamed I was getting into bed," she said, "and climbed out of the window."

Mrs. Miller lives with her daughter, Mrs. Joseph Scherbel Jr. Mrs. Scherbel's mother-in-law lives on the first floor. She heard Mrs. Miller fall and strike a sheet of tin on a board. She went into the yard and when she saw what had happened called two policemen.

MISSOURI PACIFIC RAILWAY SYSTEM TO BE REORGANIZED

Bond Issue of $150,000,000 and $240,000,000 Capitalization to Be Authorized.

A reorganization of the Missouri Pacific Railway Co. and the other Gould lines which have been considered a part of the Missouri Pacific system will be effected at a meeting of stockholders to be held Friday at the company's headquarters in St. Louis. The change involves the consolidation of the Gould lines under Missouri Pacific control, a bond issue of at least $150,000,000 and a capitalization of $240,000,000. A blanket mortgage to cover all properties will secure the bond issue.

According to railroad officials, about $90,000,000 of the bond issue will be used to fund outstanding indebtedness, while the remaining $60,000,000 will be available for working capital.

The new company will be known as the Missouri Pacific Railway Co. It will be organized under the laws of Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska.

Butts to Build.

A residence to cost $10,000, exclusive of the site, will be erected by W. W. Butts of the Butts Realty Co. in University City. It will occupy a lot 50x200 feet on Washington avenue. It will be two stories high and will contain 10 rooms, finished in hardwood. The appointments and arrangement will be complete, the exterior of the building being of attractive design.

O'CONNOR HERE FROM LITTLE WORK, EXPECTING ORDERS TO GO EAST ON SCOUTING DUTY

BROWNS REST MONDAY, EXPECTING HARD BATTLES IN GAMES AGAINST HIGHLANDERS TODAY

RACING

O'CONNOR HERE TO GET ORDERS FROM HEDGES

Fox of Goose Hill Says He Doesn't Know Whether He's to Be Player or Scout.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

JACK O'CONNOR is in town. He arrived early Tuesday morning and is ready to begin the work of building up the Browns' baseball team at once.

Jack doesn't know what he's to do. He hasn't even heard from Owner Hedges of the local club. All he knew when he arrived was that the Little Rock club had told him he had been traded to St. Louis for Outfielder Jack McAleese.

After spending the night in the burg of De Soto, Mo., I caught the train there this morning before 6 o'clock and found O'Connor snuggly tucked away in lower 7, apparently dreaming of better things to come. He overheard my conversation with the porter trying to learn if a sturdy Irishman, well tanned and wearing many big diamonds, was a passenger on that car.

The noise awoke Jack and he stuck his head out of the curtains, glad to see anyone from St. Louis. He arose immediately and talked baseball from there on into St. Louis, where he went at once to his mother's home for breakfast.

"I don't know a thing about the plans for the future," said Jack. "I didn't try to find out anything. As soon as I learned that the deal had been made, I packed up and came back to St. Louis just as quickly as possible.

"Say, it's good to get back here again. They can talk all they want to me about the Sunny South. But I'm glad to get away from those mosquitos. I think I tried a half dozen different patent oils to keep them from biting so I could sleep at night. But those big fellows down there get fat on it.

"I learned of the deal last Saturday in Birmingham. I was with the Little Rock club down there and after the game Mike Finn, the manager, came to my room at the hotel and told me I had been traded to St. Louis and was to report at once. Say, those were the kindest words he had spoken to me all summer. I didn't waste a bit of time, either. I grabbed a night train for Little Rock, then spent Monday there packing up my clothes and getting what money was coming to me and I was pretty glad to board that old train for home last night.

O'Connor Still Ignorant What Disposition Will Be Made of Him

"I HAVN'T heard from Hedges at all. I don't know where he is, but there may be some orders for me here. I don't have an idea in the world that he will send me to join the team. I rather suppose he wants me to scout through the minor leagues for new ball players. I don't see what good I could do by joining the club. But that's Hedges' business and I'm ready to go anywhere.

"I was sorry to miss that trip to the Pacific Coast. I had never been there and wanted to go, but those felows at Little Rock got mad at Hedges for trying to get me away and then held me until it was too late. I suppose Padden and Hedges have found some live ones out there. There's not many left in the Southern League that can be procured. Nearly every player that is worth having has been disposed of already to some big league team.

"The best player in that league is this little catcher Casey at Little Rock. I have been trying all the time to land him for the Browns and now I'm afreid that Detroit has stepped in ahead of us. Casey wants to come here, but I learned only last week that Detroit was to have its pick of the Little Rock club this fall as payment for Perry, the young third baseman that the Tigers gave to Little Rock last spring. I don't know that the deal is made for Casey so we may land him yet. I don't know many more down there now that we would care to have except one or two that have already been sold to other clubs.

"I knew all the time that Hedges was going to get me away from that Southern League. Of course, when he and Finn had their little row in June it blocked the deal for the time being. Then because Finn was sore at him, he tried to make it unpleasant for me with the team. Just the same, he was growing anxious because he didn't hear any more from Hedges and I guess he began to think the St. Louis boss had given me up entirely. He knew the drafting season was just about to begin and that Hedges could draft me from his team and then would have to pay only a small amount of money for the release. Now, whether he took the matter up with Hedges again or not, I don't know. I didn't bother my head about it for I felt all the time that I would be here sooner or later. I knew nothing about the deal until Saturday night when Finn told me I was traded, and never tried to find out how he and Hedges came to terms.

Jack Carefully Dodges Suspension and Brings All His Money Home With Him

"THE Little Rock Club began losing soon after Hedges had been down to see me in June. I suppose Finn blamed me for it, thinking I didn't try as I had before. But the truth of it is, that Little Rock hasn't as good a ball club as the others. We stuck up there in the fight during the first two months or more, by stealing bases. I saw the club couldn't hit and the pitchers were not very strong, so we had to get runs some way in order to win games. I got them to running the bases and it was surprising what success they had.

"Rhodes and Higgins, the two pitchers we got from the Cardinals, are both good men and helped the club out of a bad hole. But Higgins is very young yet and Rhodes has lacked control so they haven't been winning all the time.

"It's a hard matter to strengthen a ball club. The public doesn't realize how fortunate a club is that lands a star player in one year. Look what Ty Cobb has been to Detroit and yet when he was bought, he didn't look any better than dozens of other minor leaguers who were breaking in at the same time. But the only way to land a star, I guess, is to try out a lot of likely looking fellows. One of them may turn out to be a second Ty Cobb.

"You should have seen me playing in the game down in that league. You know, I consider that I'm all in as a player. But Mike Finn, the boss of the Little Rock club, seemed to think differently. I have felt since that he may have been trying to get in a row with me and suspend me without pay for a while, but I wouldn't row with him nor the umpires, so I have all my money with me.

"We were playing in Birmingham, and were shy an outfielder. Cocash had been sent to San Antonio and Finn asked me to play the outfield. Well, I thought he was joking, but he was in earnest, said he wanted me there because I could hit. He's the first fellow in some time that has told me I could hit.

"However, I went out there for the first game of a double-header, and some fellow hit a line drive. Well, I got it right on the thumb of my left hand and the ball went to the fence. We sent a pitcher in the outfield for the next game."

Jack will spend the time visiting with his mother and brother until he learns just what Hedges wants him to do. It is likely he will be right here in the city for a few days until Mr. Hedges returns from the coast, and then the chances are that he and Hedges will take a trip together through the minor leagues of the East.

HANS WAGNER IS READY TO RESUME SLUGGING

PITTSBURG, Pa., Aug. 3.—Hans Wagner will be back in the game with the Pirates beginning Tuesday, when the leaders will play Brooklyn. He was forced to retire during the fourth inning of Friday's game on account of the injury received during last Wednesday's contest. Monday morning a rumor was set afloat that Wagner has heart trouble and would be unable to play for many days.

The club physician denied this story, stating that Wagner's injury is only a sprained muscle in his left side and is not serious. The physician said that he would be able to play at once.

Comiskey, president of the Chicago American League team, was outbid and therefore failed to purchase Frank ("Red") Farrell, the Marion (Ohio State League) outfielder, who was Monday sold to the New York American League team for $2500. Pittsburg, Kansas City and Cincinnati also bid.

Farrell is batting .329 and is the only .300 hitter in the Ohio State League. The scout who had purchased him saw Farrell, on Monday, break up a game in the twelfth inning with a great drive to the fence.

WALLACE HOT OVER STORY OF GRIGGS' FIGHT

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Jimmy McAleer and his Brownies laid off Monday and enjoyed the delightful weather. They didn't even go to the park for a rehearsal, as the boss didn't think it necessary. McAleer reports all hands to the good except Rhody Wallace, who is still weak from the effects of the attack of malaria which laid him out just before the team left St. Louis.

Wallace is trying to get his strength up to the top notch so that he will be at his best when he gets back to St. Louis and finds the man who originated the story that he had been in battle with Griggs. That story got under Wallace's hide because it was printed in Pittsburg and was read by his father and mother and it worried the old folks a great deal.

McAleer is as sore over the story as Wallace and says he can't understand the malice that could have prompted it, as Wallace not only is a man that gets along without quarreling with anyone, but he was always especially friendly with Griggs.

On the last day Wallace played, says McAleer, he looked like a man with the jaundice, so deeply was he inoculated with the malarial poisoning. McAleer says he tried to get him to stay out of both games that day, but Wallace stuck it out and was in a state of collapse after the second game.

The Browns had six games scheduled for the four days here and the postponement Monday cut down the time allowance to three days and he kicked on the double-header arrangement for every day of the stay, and has secured permission to let one of the postponed games go over until the next trip.

There will be a double-header Tuesday, with Waddell and Dinneen slated to do the heavy work.

McAleer is quite contented with the way the team is going now and expects to take some of the conceit out of the Highlanders, whose good work against Detroit has made them as cockey as a bunch of pennant winners.

SEATTLE TEAM STILL IN DOUBT

Unless St. Louisans interested in athletics loosen up their purse strings, there is a chance that the Western Association of the W. A. A. U. may not send a team of athletes to the national championships at Seattle, Wash.

The National A. A. U. offered to pay half the expenses of a team of five men, at least James E. Sullivan, president of the national body, made this offer, in all probability working in conjunction with the Seattle Exposition Co. It was suggested that three men be sent from St. Louis and one each from Kansas City and Louisville.

According to Hans Wulff, the expenses of each of the athletes would be at least $100. If five men are sent, this means that $250 will have to be raised by the Western Association. From what can be learned, contributions to the fund are not coming in as rapidly as they might.

It would not be much of a surprise if the team from the Western Association is finally cut down to Carl Forline, the sprinter, and Hans Wulff, the shot putter. These two men should be able to make a good showing, as they are undoubtedly the stars of the Western Association.

MAGNATES NAME JOHN HEYDLER LEAGUE LEADER

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—About an hour after the funeral of Harry Pulliam Monday, John Heydler of Washington, secretary of the league, was chosen president of the league at a special meeting of the directors. There was some feeling that it was indelicate to name Mr. Pulliam's successor at this time, but the league's immediate need of a qualified head overcame the qualm.

Besides electing Mr. Heydler to fill Mr. Pulliam's unexpired term, the directors concerned themselves only with paying tribute to Mr. Pulliam's memory. They gave the remainder of his salary for 1909 to his estate, and they appointed Garry Herrmann of Cincinnati, Barney Dreyfuss of Pittsburg and Charles Murphy of Chicago as a committee to select and have erected in Cave Hill a suitable monument to Mr. Pulliam. They also provided that all players in the National League shall wear crepe for 30 days.

The meeting was attended by four of the five league directors—Murphy, Dreyfuss, Ebbets and Dovey. Garry Herrmann reached Cincinnati Tuesday from the West.

Though there was no set eulogy prepared by the committee, each director spoke of Mr. Pulliam as "the squarest man in baseball" and one who had wielded an influence for the best over the national game.

SHEEPSHEAD WILL OFFER HORSEMEN TEN STAKES

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Entries for the fall meeting of the Coney Island Jockey Club, at Sheepshead Bay, next month, close Monday. The announcement of the stake events indicate the club's anticipation of a successful season.

The largest stake is for $3000, the Twin City Handicap, one mile and a quarter, for 3-year-olds and upwards. There are eight stakes for $1500 each and two for $2000 each.

The Rose Qualitys defeated the Crunden-Martins in a game played at Carondelet Park, 6 to 5.

BELGIUM OPENS ARMS TO SLOAN

Copyright, 1909, by Press Publishing Co.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—Sporting Life says: "We are informed that Tod Sloan will be granted a license by the Belgium authorities, and if no objection is made by the stewards of the English Jockey Club he will ride at Ostend for M. Coppee, president of the Belgium Jockey Club, and M. de Neuter's stable."

It is not considered likely that the English Jockey Club will raise any objection to Sloan's riding on the Continent. In many quarters, too, their acquiescence in the present instance is believed to be an indication that they are showing a relenting spirit, and that Sloan will be permitted in England before long. It is eight years since his license was withdrawn.

WRAY'S COLUMN.

A Forfeit for What?

CAN anyone explain what all this coil over a forfeit in connection with the Jeffries-Johnson fight is about? Each of the heavy persons in the affair is now supposed to have put up $5000, presumably to bind the match. But ropes of sand would be steel cables as compared with the efficacy, or want of it, of the aforementioned forfeit to serve the purpose intended.

The forfeit means nothing and is merely part of the insistent advertising efforts devised by the promoters of the match. So far there has been nothing said as to what the $5000 is to cover, and so far as contrary arrangements for the disposition of the same is concerned, in event of failure of the men to agree, the checks would simply be returned to the parties who put them up. Neither party would lose a cent or be out anything but an immense volume of wind. The time for forfeits in the matter of belligerents is when articles are signed to fight and the conditions agreed on. If the money is posted then it will mean something beside a plan for more news space.

The New President.

The naming of Mr. John Arnold Heydler to the office of president of the National League came Monday as predicted. Mr. Heydler, on account of his active connection with the president's office and his familiarity with the routine of the work, was the logical man for the position. In still other ways Mr. Heydler's advent to the position should prove desirable. Mr. Heydler is a tireless workman. He found it not too irksome to transact not only the duties of the secretary-treasurer of the organization, but filled the post of president during the absence of Mr. Pulliam. Mr. Heydler is a young man, barely 39, and has been brought up in an atmosphere of baseball. During his connection with the sporting editorship of a Washington newspaper he helped the American League gain a foothold in that city. He has been identified with the National's office as secretary since 1902.

Perhaps in all the country there is only one other man who would have been fitted to jump into the work of the presidency of a big league in midseason and fill satisfactorily the duties of the office. And that gentleman would probably not have accepted the office had it been tendered him—Mr. Joseph Flanner of St. Louis.

Talk about the "mutability of mundane things" probably nothing can class in the gentle art of mutability—so to speak—with baseball. Last year the Browns won the pennant—the Indianapolis Browns, if you please. This year the team is absolutely last in the race. It's just a little better record in the art of declining and falling than our own Browns achieved.

A Financial Problem.

JEFF will sail on the day that Johnson arrives in New York. Of course, this sustains the interest a few months longer and tends to create acute inflammation of the fight followers' curiosity. But it also, by delaying the fight, creates interest of another sort. And right here we merge from fight into finance.

What becomes of the interest on the $20,000 that is to lie idle in bank? If the men were so careless as to really forfeit the money, would the interest be forfeited as well as the principal?

Allowing Jeff five months to return from Carlsbad, two months to sign articles of agreement and three years to get in training it is easy to see that the interest increment might develop into a high-class sinecure. In 18 years at 6 per cent the sum will double itself. By the time the fight takes place Jeff won't need the purse, owing to the accrued interest on his forfeit.

Byrne's Job Still Safe.

ROGER BRESNAHAN appears to have lost the chance of getting a promising young player in Alvin Dolan of the Rockford (Ill.) team. Dolan is a third baseman and he has been lifted from Rockford for the sum of $2000. Bresnahan thought he was not worth more than $1500, according to dispatches. With Byrne doing well, there is not much clamor for a third baseman.

All the teams of both leagues seem to be filling up gaps with young material, except the Browns. The scouts from Camp Hedges have so far failed to make a single capture worthy of note. Possibly men have been secured, but are being kept under cover. Hedges and Padden have disappeared as if the earth had opened and the Jack O'Connor deal came like lightning out of a clear sky. If three pitchers, two infielders and a world's record base stealer were to come similarly, there would not be any great amount of complaint.

Before Mr. Felix Isman of Philadelphia discharges any more managers of baseball teams perhaps he will in future first make sure he is on the payroll himself.

Indianapolis had a pennant team last year and made more in dividends than the club is capitalized for. It sold Bush, Marquard, Durham and others and added some $25,000 to this total. But the team will lose that much in this year's receipts and is sacrificing a team besides. Rather bad jockeying.

S.S.S. MAKES A LASTING CURE

Not only its proven ability to cure, but its absolute safety as a remedy, has made S. S. S. the most extensively used of all medicines in the treatment of Contagious Blood Poison. Unlike the strong mineral mixtures, which temporarily remove the outward symptoms and shut the disease up in the system, there to carry on its destructive work on the delicate and vital organs, S. S. S. strikes directly at the root, and by purifying the blood of every trace of the virus, completely and permanently cures the trouble. S. S. S. is Nature's blood purifier, harmless in its action and certain in its good results. It is made from a combination of roots and herbs, each of which has a definite and specific action in purifying the blood. Years were spent in selecting and proportioning the different ingredients, but when S. S. S. was perfected it soon demonstrated its superiority over all other blood medicines, and now, after 40 years, it is still the one and only certain cure for Contagious Blood Poison. While driving out the poison from the circulation S. S. S. builds up and strengthens the system by its fine vegetable tonic effects. If you are suffering with Contagious Blood Poison S. S. S. is your most certain reliance, and because of its freedom from mercury, potash or any other mineral, it is absolutely safe for every one. CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION OF THE INCORPORATION OF ST. LOUIS

During the week of Oct. 3d to 9th inclusive more than 500 Mayors of American Cities will be present in this city to participate in the ceremonies celebrating the Centennial of the Incorporation of St. Louis. Thousands of dollars will be expended in making the event as big a success relatively as the World's Fair, which was a world beater. Here is the program. Four grand pageants illustrating the City's history, utilities, educational merits and industries; spherical balloon races, dirigible balloon contests, aeroplane trials, Veiled Prophet's parade and ball, new municipal building corner stone laying ceremonies; reunions and Jubilee meetings of religious, civic, professional and benevolent organizations; athletic tournaments at the new Fairground Park; illuminations and fireworks. The crest of prosperity's wave will be sweeping through this great city. Get your craft in shape to ride abreast of it. If you need help to do this, telephone your want ads to the Post-Dispatch—your credit is good if you rent a phone.

CHILD BELIEVES IN FAIRIES; TRIES TO FLY IN SLEEP

Girl of 8 Impressed by Performance of Barrie's "Peter Pan."

One J. M. Barrie, nature-faking playwright, owes a box of candy and an apology to little Miss Sue Seyboldt, 5 years old, going on 6, who tried to fly because she saw the fairy children in Mr. Barrie's play, "Peter Pan," sail across the stage under wing.

Sue is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Seyboldt of 4002 Vernon avenue, who took her to the Suburban Garden Theater Sunday night to see "Peter Pan."

The little girl was intensely interested in the play, particularly in the flying scene in the first act, where Peter Pan flies in through a window and the little boys and girls fly out of bed and away with Peter.

When the curtain went down, Sue turned to Mr. Seyboldt and asked:

"Can you fly, papa?"

"Why, no," said her papa.

Mamma Couldn't Fly.

"Can you fly, mamma?" asked Sue.

"No, indeed," replied her mamma.

"Then I can't fly either," sorrowfully said the little girl.

Nevertheless it seems that Sue reconsidered the matter during the night, or perhaps she dreamed that she had wings like to fairy children, for when she awoke Monday she arose in her bed, spread out her arms and leaped off into space.

Mrs. Seyboldt, who had stepped out of her bed chamber, heard a fall and a cry. She rushed into the room and found little Sue picking herself up from the floor.

"Mamma, I tried to fly," said Sue, but I hurt my nose. I can't fly like the Peter Pan children. Why can't I, mamma?"

Sue's nose was almost, but fortunately, not quite, broken by her fall. She came down almost as hard on her bedroom floor as did Darius Green on the ground outside his father's barn when he leaped off the hayloft with his new wings, to fly over the circus and astonish all creation.

REAL ESTATE AGENTS' REPORTS OF THEIR SALES

Bismarck Building Floor Leased.

Loewenstein Bros. yesterday closed a lease on the entire third floor of Bismarck Building, 408 North Twelfth street, for a term of years, to Tom M. Wheless, who is the St. Louis representative of Gilmer Bros. Co., an Eastern dry goods commission firm. The Bismarck Building is opposite the main entrance to the Jefferson Hotel, and was erected by Louis Friedman at a cost of $50,000. The lease is from the Victoria Buffet Co., to which corporation Loewenstein Bros. leased the entire Bismarck Building for a term of ten years several months ago.

Business Block Sold for $9000.

The Joseph F. Dickmann Real Estate Co. reports the sale of one of the busiest corners in South St. Louis, at 2800-2802 Lemp avenue. The lot has a frontage of 50 feet on Lemp avenue, and has a two-story brick building consisting of two stores and two flats of four rooms and bath each, the property renting for $1194. The price was $9000. The property was sold for the account of William Langmeyer to John Doenhoefer for a business and investment.

Wensel Property Sold for $10,000.

The Haase Realty Co. closed the sale of the Wensel property, consisting of a double two-story brick and a triple three-story brick, with lot 167x117¼ feet, at 3831-33-35-37-39 Texas avenue. This is an old landmark and has been in the Wensel family for 35 years and was known as Ritschy's apple orchard. The purchaser, Gustav Mugele, will make extensive improvements. The price paid was $10,000.

O'Neil Home is Sold.

A. T. Terry & Co. report the sale of the residence of David N. O'Neil, president of the O'Neil Lumber Co., 300 North Newstead avenue, an 11-room house, having a frontage of 60 feet on Newstead avenue, to Helen G. Lodge, who purchased for a home.

ST. LOUIS COOL, NOT A HOT CITY, RECORDS PROVE

Army of Traveling Men to Correct Erroneous Impressions of Weather.

REAMS OF PAMPHLETS

Business Men's League Opens Campaign for Information of the World.

Pamphlets intended to correct the erroneous impression that St. Louis is a hot place in summer will be hurried through the St. Louis Sales Managers' Association to the great army of St. Louis traveling salesmen. How such an impression got abroad is a mystery. There is a suspicion that the traveling salesmen themselves helped create it. However that may be, the fact remains that the inhabitants of the several thousand neighboring cities imagine St. Louis a place so tropical in the summer as to cause perspiration.

Indignant that this impression should exist, the Business Men's League announced yesterday through its secretary, W. F. Saunders, that the League would place at the disposal of the St. Louis Sales Managers' Association, a permanent off-shoot of the St. Louis Centennial Association, as many thousands of pamphlets disproving the St. Louis heat theory as there are St. Louis traveling salesmen. The salemen are expected to spare just enough time from their work of exploiting the St. Louis Centennial Celebration, Oct. 3 to 9, to educate first themselves and then their country customers on the subject of St. Louis weather.

Proved by the Records.

The first question to be answered about any place of permanent residence or business is its average of health and comfort.

As this depends first of all on climate, the answer given by the records of the United States Signal Service is that St. Louis has 60 per cent of unclouded sunshine, against 55 for Boston and 56 for New York, representing the Atlantic Coast; 57 for Chicago, representing the Lakes; 54 for St. Paul, representing the Upper Mississippi, and 53 for New Orleans, representing the lower.

The records of the Weather Bureau explain this further by showing the average winter temperature of St. Louis as 34 degrees against 16 in St. Paul, and 55 in New Orleans; with the average summer temperature of St. Louis 78 degrees, against 82 in New Orleans, and 71 in St. Paul. St. Louis, between the extremes of heat and cold, is 8 degrees warmer on the averages, for both winter and summer, than Chicago. Its average temperature for the year is 55.8 degrees. Boston, with a winter average of 5 degrees colder than St. Louis, has an annual average of 48.8. With a winter average of 18 degrees below St. Louis, St. Paul has an annual average of 43.9.

City's Normal Rainfall.

It is exceeded in the United States only in the "rainless" region of the extreme West, while St. Louis with more sunshine than St. Paul has eight inches more rainfall. Its normal rainfall (total precipitation) is 37.20, compared with 33.28 for Chicago, 37.28 for Buffalo, 43.38 for Boston, 44.63 for New York and 41.17 for Philadelphia; while it exceeds all these cities in its percentage of unclouded sunshine.

Its advantages of location between the extremes of heat and cold are shown by the report of average mean temperatures for January and July, and of mean annual temperature calculated as the normal by the Chief of the United States Weather Bureau on reports up to 1908.

Washington, D. C.	54.7

Average temperature for the whole winter: St. Louis, 34; Chicago, 26; St. Paul, 16; New York, 32; Boston, 29. Percentages of unclouded sunshine: St. Louis, 60; New Orleans, 53; St. Paul, 54; Chicago, 57; Boston, 55; New York City, 56.

Another argument offered in the Business Men's League book to substantiate the claim of a perfect climate is the low death rate.

EIGHT CAR LINES ARE BLOCKED

Workers Walk From Eighteenth Street and Are Tardy.

The Pine street cars were blockaded Tuesday, as they have been the last three mornings, and several thousand persons walked two to 10 blocks to their work and explained late arrivals to their employers, only to hear, in many cases, the query, "Why don't you start earlier?"

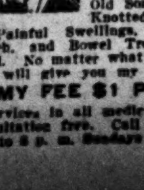

While a row of Olive, Cherokee, Tower Grove, Laclede, Market, Chouteau, Bellefontaine and Manchester cars packed Pine street beyond Eighteenth, it was said at United Railways headquarters that there was no "trouble," and the trouble wagon was not out.

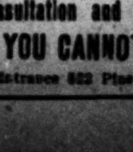

"We have blockades on all our lines," said President McCulloch.

RECEIVER ASKED FOR DELMAR ON GOODWIN CLAIM

New Yorker Seeks to Collect $3500, Week's Salary Said to Be Due Actor.

HORSE IS IN DISPUTE

Comedian's Manager Denies Story That Animal Was Ridden to Death.

Charles A. Powers filed suit Tuesday in the St. Louis Circuit Court asking for the appointment of a receiver for the Delmar Garden Amusement Co., on claims assigned to him by Nat C. Goodwin, comedian, July 31.

Chief of the claims assigned to Powers by Goodwin is one for $3500, a week's salary, which the actor alleges is due him. He says he signed a contract March 31 to play four weeks at the Delmar Dramatic Theater for $14,000, and has been paid for but three weeks.

Goodwin also claims $200 which he says he paid for the right to play "A Gilded Fool." He claims $125 for printed matter, which he says he supplied.

Another claim is for the recovery of scenery for "In Mizzoura," valued by Goodwin at $3000.

It is alleged in the petition that the amusement company is insolvent and Powers seeks to attach the gate receipts.

Efforts to reach J. C. Jannopoulo, general manager of Delmar Garden Tuesday were unsuccessful.

Goodwin's Manager Indignant.

Walter Turner, manager for Mr. Goodwin, expressed indignation Tuesday at what he terms the Delmar Garden management's unjust treatment of the actor.

"Mr. Goodwin," he said, "neither defaults in payment of his debts, nor is he a brute. The attachment of his salary at 11 o'clock Saturday night, when he had to take a train at 11:55, starting for Europe, looks to me like a 'frame-up.' The charge that he owed money to William Alther for a horse that he rode to death is untrue. He did not ride a horse to death.

"Mr. Goodwin and John Ahlberg, his valet, went riding every morning. Some days ago Alther rode a horse which went lame about four miles out in the county and he got off and led it home. Five days later I met Alther, who has the pony concession and is on the Delmar grounds most of the time. He remarked casually that he had had to kill that horse.

Claim for Horse Filed Late.

"He said it was pretty old, anyhow, about 12 years, and had been overfed. He said nothing whatever about hard riding by Goodwin or his valet. Friday night Alther presented his bill to me, as manager, for the use of his horses, $123, and I paid it. Absolutely nothing was mentioned about any dead horse claim. That was left till less than an hour before Mr. Goodwin had to leave St. Louis.

"I simply want it understood that Mr. Goodwin always pays his just debts and is not cruel to animals. That attachment claim would indicate otherwise, and it certainly does him an injustice.

"President Jannopoulo of the Delmar Garden Amusement Co., in a conference I had with him, told me the company didn't have the money to pay Goodwin's salary and other claims, which amount to about $7000, including $3000 worth of 'In Mizzoura' scenery which Goodwin had sent from New York. I paid the charges from New York. It was agreed that the Delmar people were to pay charges both ways. The scenery has not been returned to New York. It is still at Delmar."

CALVIN WELLS DEAD; HE BUILT $15,000,000 FORTUNE FROM $25

Pittsburg Iron and Steel Man Forced to Go to Work at 14 Without Education.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 3.—Calvin Wells, who, at the age of 20, came from Pittsburg in 1847 worth $25, died suddenly of heart disease last night, leaving an estate estimated to be worth upward of $15,000,000.

Mr. Wells early became interested in the iron and steel industry, was a partner in several firms and for years was the head of the Pittsburg Forge and Iron Co. In 1877 he acquired a controlling interest in the Philadelphia Press and on the recommendation of Whitelaw Reid placed Charles Emery Smith in charge as editor.

Mr. Wells was born in Genesee County, New York, Dec. 26, 1827. His parents died during his boyhood and he did not acquire in youth the education he wished, as he was obliged to go to work when 14 years of age.

YOUNG GIRLS ROB CHILD OF $5 ON HER WAY TO STORE

Bertha Zubelman, 9 years old, of 1425 North Fourteenth street, on her way to a store Monday afternoon with a $5 bill, on Wash street, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets, was stopped by two girls, one 14 years old and the other not more than 11.

"Where are you going, sister?" asked the elder.

"To the store," replied Bertha.

"Have you any money, sister?" the larger girl then asked.

"Yes, but why do you call me sister?" Bertha inquired.

"Show me the money and I will tell you," said the big girl.

Bertha opened her hand. The big girl grabbed the $5 bill and fled with her companion.

STOCKS DROP IN WALL STREET ON LONDON NEWS

Declines Feature the Early Market When England Fails to Follow Advances.

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—The open dealings in stocks today showed mixed changes, but the declines were more numerous and more important.

The reluctance shown by the London market to follow the two-days' advance here while that market was closed induced some heavy realizing sales. Reading ran off 1⅜ and Southern Pacific, New York Central, Missouri Pacific, Southern Railway preferred, Amalgamated Copper and American Smelting large fractions. Pressed Steel Car was marked up 2 points. The trading was active.

Although there was aggressive buying of a number of the low-priced railroads and specialties, the usual leaders lacked strength and sold off later to below yesterday's closing. Reading made up its opening loss, but fell back to the lowest. Southern Pacific, St. Louis & San Francisco second preferred and American Ice lost a point. Railway Steel Spring and American Hide and Leather preferred improved 2½ and a number of other specialties 1 to 1½.

Advances in copper stocks and in some specialties helped to steady the market, but realizing sales were renewed from time to time. Federal Sugar preferred and General Chemical sold at advances of 5, United States Pipe 2, Pittsburg Coal preferred 1⅜, International Pump 1⅛, and American Smelting and several others 1. Northern Pacific declined 1 and Cleveland, C., C. & St. Louis 1⅛. The market was dull and irregular at noon. Bonds were steady.

The rise to record prices in Union Pacific and the U. S. Steel stocks stimulated the market. There was a large accumulation of Interborough-Metropolitan preferred and the 4½-per-cent bonds. Union Pacific rose to 202¼; U. S. Steel brought 75 and the preferred 129¼. U. S. Rubber and American Car preferred and Bethlehem Steel stocks advanced 2¼ to 2½, Metropolitan Street Railway and Interborough-Metropolitan preferred 2, the 4½-per-cent bonds 3, Wabash preferred 3⅛ and Amalgamated Copper 1.

FINANCIAL ITEMS

BOSTON, Aug. 3.—The leading factors of the week affecting industrial conditions are the practical passing from the stage of the tariff controversy and the continued splendid outlook for crops.

The tonic effect of the harvest promise, coupled with easy money, is already felt strongly in such pioneer lines as iron and steel, where the pace of recovery in midsummer is practically unprecedented. In other lines, the new impulse has not yet been largely felt, but there is practically no real exception to the story of more or less tangible improvement, alike in inquiries, orders and collections.

HAVANA, Aug. 3.—A presidential decree awarded the Cuban 4½ per cent loan of $16,500,000 to Speyer Bros. at 88¼. Bids were offered by Johnson, Harding & Co., A. B. Leach & Co., Walter Stanton, Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co., William Salomon & Co. and the Seligmans. J. P. Morgan & Co. refused to bid on more than the first installment of $5,000,000.

Foreign exchange started on its downward course during the past week, slowly at first, but ending up on Friday with a break of 25 points.

BOSTON, Aug. 3.—The American Woolen Co. is just closing its books for the spring, 1910, business, and the result has been highly satisfactory, in so far as the entire product of the great majority of the company's worsted mills has already been booked at the advance in prices and the mills' product removed from the market.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—The banks last week gained from the interior $2,068,000, which compares with a gain from the interior for the week ended July 31, 1908, of $6,564,100. Receipts of new gold were $2,352,000, comparing with $2,642,900 for the corresponding week of last year. Gold exports amounted to $900,000 in coin to Argentina. The loss on Subtreasury operations proper of $819,000 compares with a loss last year of $3,401,900. The next result of the reported movements of currency was a gain by the banks of $2,701,000. In the week ended July 31, 1908, a gain of $5,805,100 was reported.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—The Illinois Steel Co. has secured an additional Atchison rail order for 7800 tons.

Gary mills' output for week was 5500 tons, against 1000 tons six weeks ago.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 3.—Conditions in the iron and steel trade are uniformly favorable, the only exception being certain labor troubles, which are of minor importance.

RAILROAD NEWS AND GOSSIP

The report of the Alabama, Tennessee & Northern Railroad Co. for the month of June and 12 months ended June 30, compares as follows:

	1909.	1908.	Changes.
June gross	$4,047	$3,552	Inc. $495
June net	1,864	1,808	Inc. 56

MONTREAL, Aug. 3.—Following the announcement by the Canadian Pacific Railway that it intended to increase the price of irrigated lands in the Bow River District from $25 to $30 an acre, the company sold 100,000 acres for $2,500,000.

The bulletin of the American Railway Association states that on July 21 the total surplus of cars on the lines of the United States and Canada stood at 243,354 as compared with 260,227 on July 7, the date of the last report. The decrease is 16,873, or about 4 per cent. Increased demands for box and coal cars decreased the surplus of these classes 12,292, while the surplus of flat cars decreased 756. The decrease in coal cars was particularly large, due to a great extent to increased industrial activity.

Chicago & Northwestern, whose name is synonymous with conservative management, ended the fiscal year 1909 with a surplus applicable to dividends equivalent to 12 per cent on the entire amount of common and preferred.

Or, under the terms which govern this stock, it earned 10 per cent on its $22,395,000 of preferred—which is receiving 8 per cent, but which is entitled to 10 per cent before the common gets more than 7 per cent—with a balance sufficient to pay the 10 per cent to which the $99,612,000 common is then entitled and still leave $2,500,000 over.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—The Chicago City Railway Co. has rejected unconditionally the demands of the men for increased wages and offers to renew the existing schedule or submit the whole wage question to arbitration, but refused absolutely the closed shop demand. The employes of both the big street railway systems will hold a joint meeting again within the next couple of days to decide on concerted action.

NATIVE CATTLE—Generally it was a slow market throughout the entire forenoon. The supply was not heavy, but other markets had fair runs and local buyers were inclined to be discriminating. There was a good proportion of steers among the offerings, the best of which sold up to $6.90. There was a representative supply of cows and heifers that averaged about the same as yesterday's offerings as far as quality was concerned. For the most part the market on steers and cows held around steady. Calves sold off about 25c. Stock cattle manifested very little change.

SOUTHERN CATTLE—The run in the quarantine division came far below yesterday's figures. The supply ran mainly to Oklahoma and Texas stock. Buyers took hold readily and as a result of this the market ruled strong to 10c higher. The movement displayed considerable activity, with a reasonably early clearance assured. She stuff and calves were right around steady, Oklahoma steers sold up to $4.90, this being the top price of the day in the Southern division.

HOGS—While the supply of hogs was some better than on Monday, still there were fewer hogs than usually on Tuesday, as the offerings were but around 5000 head, while twice that number would be considered a moderate run. The market was draggy and 5@10c lower, the top being $7.85 and the bulk sold at $7.60@7.75.

At noon they seemed to have a little stronger appearance and looked as though it might close on a better basis. Best butchers and shipping hogs sold at $7.75@7.85, best packers at $7.60@7.75, fair mixed packers, $7.35@7.55, best lights (125 to 160 lbs.), $7.25@7.80, best pigs (110 lbs. and under) $6.50@7.25, while a good many common to fair pigs and lights sold from $5@6.25.

HORSE AND MULE MARKET.

Receipts of horses were of light volume and not sufficient for the demand. Several purchasers were on the market from the South and East in quest of horses.

The mule market showed no new development today. Medium and trashy stuff was draggy but good, big finished mules and miners were in good demand.

ALDERMEN LATE; OPPOSITION ELECTS ITS OWN CANDIDATE

Upper Alton Mayor Gets Best of Tardy Ones by Calling Meeting on Time.

Three Upper Alton aldermen have learned the value of being on time, but Dr. H. T. Burnap got the place on the Board of Education that they didn't want him to have.

Stephen Crawford is president of the Upper Alton Council. He and Warren Slocum and Theodore Scovill, aldermen, wanted Dr. Burnap to succeed E. J. McPhillips, whose term as a member of the Board of Education has expired. Alderman George Phelan, William Lightner, S. A. Wightman and J. D. Pace wanted McPhillips, who is a political power in Upper Alton, re-elected.

It is customary for the aldermen to "loaf" from 7 to 7:30, although the legal hour of meeting is 7 p. m. Crawford and the two aldermen favorable to Dr. Burnap were on hand at 7 p. m. Phelan was the only member of the opposition there. But with the others he made a quorum, so President Crawford called the meeting to order.

Slocum nominated Dr. Burnap. Phelan nominated McPhillips. Dr. Burnap was elected by a vote of 2 to 1.

CITY COUNCIL PASSES LAW PUTTING LID ON BELLEVILLE

Belleville has a lid. The City Council Monday night, by unanimous vote of the 13 members, adopted a dramshop measure that contains provisions new to Belleville.

Saloons must close at midnight and remain closed until 5 a. m. This is the most radical innovation. Until two years ago Belleville saloons never closed. Two years ago Mayor Fred J. Kern attempted a sort of regulation, but never maintained a five-hour drouth.

Electric pianos, singing and all sorts of music is prohibited. Improper pictures are put under the ban. Winerooms must be closed. Liquor must not be sold to intoxicated men and habitual drunkards. Saloonk[illegible]pers are forbidden to sell to minor[illegible]cept when the minors bring a can[illegible] order from th[illegible] parents, an[illegible]he be[illegible] off premises.

WHEAT CONTINUES WEAK AND LOWER

Market Still Devoid of Interest, but Prices Range Steadily Downward.

The pit element in the local wheat market is decidedly bearish. Trading is on a small scale and extensive operations on either side lacking, but the hard spots find good quantities of wheat on sale and the market seems under consistent pressure. Tuesday prices, after starting rather steady, were lowered to quite sharp declines, and then moved in a sluggish, uninteresting manner at the recessions. There were no new features and the market was dull throughout, the close was ⅛ to ⅛@¼ lower for the day.

Cables were relatively steady, which caused a rather firm range of values at the opening of the local market. The foreign crop summary was bullish. It showed unfavorable crop conditions and prospects in a majority of the European countries and in Argentina. This was the principal reason of the failure of foreign markets to respond to our previous declines. There was a large decrease in the European visible, which also encouraged the comparatively steady range abroad.

The initial short covering was soon completed and the bearish sentiment in the pit revealed. Reports of rust from the Northwest were again numerous, but are being generally discredited, as the spring wheat crop is thought to be too far advanced to sustain trouble from this source. The weather in the Northwest is clear and favorable. General expectations are still for a large yield. Climatic conditions right up to the time for cutting having been all that could be asked. The absence of export bids within workable limits is also a bearish force, as the consistently heavy run of winter wheat to the primaries is causing a steady increase in stocks.

There was no material change in the situation. Receipts, especially in the local market and other Southwestern terminals, were again very large. Supplies continue to pile up. The cash demand is inadequate and prices on the actual grain are being lowered. Country offerings are quite free and the weather favorable for the movement.

After prices had sold down sharply following a steady opening, trading fell off and the pit became almost deserted. Toward noon the market was dull and inactive with prices easy at the declines.

September wheat opened ⅛@¼c higher at $1.01⅞, declined to $1.01⅛, rallied to $1.01⅝, and declined to $1.00⅝@¾. December wheat opened ⅛@¼c lower at $1.01⅛@¼, and was offered down to $1.00⅝@¾. May wheat opened ⅛@¼c lower at $1.05, and declined to $1.04⅛.

SUGAR MARKET.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—London cables show that cane is steady at previous prices; July, 11s 4½d; best quiet but steady; July, 10s 8¼d; Aug., 10s 8¼d; Oct. and Dec. 10s [illegible].

Local refined sugars are quoted on the basis of 4.85c, less 1 per cent for standard granulated.

The local raw sugar market was firm and unchanged with centrifugal 96 test at 3.92c, muscovado, 89 test, 3.42c and molasses sugar, 89 test, 3.27c.

ST. LOUIS MONEY MARKET.

Reports from country banks in the entire territory adjacent to this city show a magnificent harvest prospect—from points as far West as Colorado and as distant as New Mexico, come the auguries of optimism. There is a general feeling that the annual outflow of currency will begin in volume in the next week or ten days and the St. Louis institutions were never in better condition to meet it.

Meanwhile interest quotations are fractionally stronger at 4½ to 4¾ per cent on three and four months' loans. There is very little 4 per cent money to be had except on demand and in this instance the collateral is scrutinized most keenly.

Mrs. Besant to Open Mankind's 'Third Eye'

Theosophist Leader Declares Long-Dormant Nerve Aroused Will Solve Mysteries.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—The ultimate perfection of all things in science, art and invention, the solution of the mysteries of religion and psychic research, is to be reached, Mrs. Annie Besant declares, through the "third eye," an organ at the base of the nose.

The above is a special design of eyeglasses for the use of policemen looking for lid-lifters.

Relegated in time past, with the vermiform appendix, the tonsils and the bristles on the tip of a donkey's ears, to the order of the functionless, this organ in the very center of the human physiognomy is destined, Mrs. Besant holds, to strike from the world the shackles of man's imperfect understanding, and to raise the curtain on every mystery, physical and astral.

This atrophied adjunct, dormant at the very threshold of the senses, the world's theosophist leader says, contains the possibility of the powers for which men have striven since Solomon's days.

There, at the base of the retrousse, lies the "third eye," the spiritual orb through which mankind is to perceive, the noted English woman believes, the mysteries of birth, life and death.

Sees New Millennium.

And when this "third eye," this second soul of lost identity, asserts its mystic operation, it will be with the coming of a new Christ and the dawn of the "sixth sub-era," as the world-famous occultist terms the crowning phase of earthly existence. It is the expounder of the qualities of this "third eye" who comes as a new John the Baptist, the forerunner of civilization's greatest epoch, she says.

Jesus Christ, now incarnate, but not manifested to man, will take a new holy body, manifest Himself and lead the people of the world in the evolution into the sixth root race within the lives of the younger people of the present generation, declared Mrs. Besant.

In this coming, she pointed out a new era, with the trusts, the Morgans, the Rockefellers, the Harrimans and the like swept into the old and dead order, and an epoch of Christian socialism, in which wisdom and compassion will make a brotherhood of man and monopolies for personal profit abhorrent and impossible.

"Airships Not New."

She pointed to the ancient lore of the East to show that a million years ago ships of the air hovered over armies, dropping forces that wiped out half an army at a time, and said that these stories, once considered fairy stories, were being proved by recent flights and that a part of the arts that had been lost for ages were coming again to the human mind.

Each of the sub-races of the past, she said, had its great teacher. Two dominant figures appeared in each. Christ had been incarnated in Hermes, in Zoroaster, in Orpheus, and had then been the coadjutor. He had come as the leader at the head of the present era, and had spent his three years of ministry in a body specially prepared for him.

Mrs. Besant declared that "those of us" who understood the occult know Christ now and would recognize him when he came again.

She declared that the Christ was the real head of all religions and is the teacher who will bless the beginning of the sixth sub-race as he blessed the beginning of the fifth. In the new coming, she said, the stay would be shorter than before unless people learn the pupil must not assume to instruct the teacher and the child the parent.

To Open "Third Eye."

The forerunner of the new era is not only going to open the eyes of the people of America, but she is going to show them the function of the "third eye" and point to the day and manner of its opening, so that this "third eye" may receive vibrations from the higher life and let the physical being in on the ground floor of things that have heretofore been veiled from mortal ken.

As the idea of this "third eye" percolated from Mrs. Besant's realm yesterday, you may describe an imaginary arc, or draw it with a soft pencil, from your right eye to the left optic. The top of the arc will bisect the base of the nose. Just under the base lies a nerve that has lost its identity. This imprisoned and hitherto idle nerve is the "third eye." It is a lazy nerve and sleeps without reminding one of its presence for ages, but once aroused it is the most important thing in the human makeup.

When the higher thought has acted as a transformer and "stepped up," the electricity that controls the nerves, just as a transformer "steps up" a 100-volt current into 30,000 volts for wireless, there leaps from mind to mind vibrations that unfold the higher science and then the physical being is taken into confidence and mankind can take up all things where religion, science, exploration and art have halted, and go by occult stages to the perfect.

SEARCHES FOR YOUNG HUSBAND

Iowan, Here, Says Son Left Bride in Galesburg.

M. E. Brown of Riverside, Io., is in St. Louis looking for his son, Frank E. Brown, who disappeared from his home at Galesburg, Ill., three weeks ago, leaving his bride of six months. The young man's wife is now with her husband's parents at Riverside.

Brown, who is sto[illegible]g at 4215 Hunt avenue, says th[illegible] does not know [illegible]hy his son le[illegible] that his daugh[illegible]ter-in-la[illegible] is [illegible]ded.

LITTLE SUFFERER FROM ECZEMA

Grew Worse in Spite of Six Months of Ablest Treatment—Sleep Terribly Broken—Face, Head and Hands Masses of Dreadful Humor.

A SINGLE SET OF CUTICURA CURED HIM

"I feel it my duty to let you know with what success I have used the Cuticura Remedies. When our baby was seven weeks old he broke out with what we thought was heat but which gradually grew worse. We called in a doctor. He said it was eczema and from that time we doctored six months with three of the best doctors in Atchison but he only got worse. His face, head and hands were a solid sore. There was no end to the suffering for him. We had to tie his little hands to keep him from scratching. He never knew what it was to sleep well from the time he took the disease until he was cured. He kept us awake all hours in the night and his health wasn't what you would call good. We tried everything but the right thing. Finally I got a set of the Cuticura Remedies and am pleased to say we did not use all of them until he was cured. We have waited seven months to see if it would return but it never has and today his skin is clear and fair as it possibly could be. I hope Cuticura may save some one else's little one's suffering and also their pocket-books. John Leason, 1403 Atchison St., Atchison, Kan., Nov. 3 and 17, 1908."

Cuticura comfort for all who suffer from facial eruptions such as acne (pimples and blackheads), acne rosacea, facial eczema, ringworm, tetter, redness, roughness and oily perspiration is found in gentle anointings with Cuticura followed by warm baths with Cuticura Soap. For preserving, purifying and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair and hands of infants, children and adults, Cuticura and Cuticura Soap are priceless.

Cuticura Soap (25c.), Cuticura Ointment (50c.) and Cuticura Resolvent (50c.), (or in the form of Chocolate Coated Pills, 25c. per vial of 60). Sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., 135 Columbus Ave., Boston, Mass. 32-page Cuticura Book, mailed free, giving description, treatment and cure of diseases of the skin.
